MPs vote for forced vaccines

by DARREN SMITH & JESSICA PETERS

ON July 13, after a 90 minute debate in a vote the public hardly knew about, MPs voted 319-246 in favour of forcing care workers and all those working in care homes to receive experimental injections, which are part of the mass mRNA drug trials being carried out until 2023.

Perhaps they are still under the impression there really is a deadly, contagious disease out there, but after 18 months with no evidence of one whatsoever, one must now really start to question the sanity of these so-called representatives. This is exactly how repressive dictatorships are formed: legislation is passed while most of the country is distracted by rather less meaningful events than the total removal of their personal freedom for ever.

This legislation covers not only the regular working staff but also requires that anyone who enters an adult care home facility be fully up to date on their vaccinations (which currently stands at two covid ones with discussion of further regular boosters), including emergency workers, tradesmen and caterers, hairdressers and so on. Anyone who therefore thinks it's going to stop at 'all care home workers' is again being deluded.

The vote went ahead regardless of the fact that there was no impact assessment available to be seen. Despite explanatory notes stipulating that there was a risk assessment, MPs were not able to read this even after the vote had already been passed - misleading parliament to vote for something they couldn't possibly know the impact of.

The care home residents themselves are NOT required to be vaccinated, only the working staff. If you are found to have been working in an adult care home and not be 'fully' vaccinated you can be given a £4000 fixed penalty notice. The law was originally going to be elderly care homes only, however they extended this decision to cover ALL adult care homes, for example for young adults with learning disabilities.

Even those who have willingly received the spike protein shots state that nobody should be forced to take part in the mRNA injection trials, which goes against the Nuremberg code and basic medical ethics. Discrimination is always how genocide begins.

Just over 75 years after Britain's brave men and women fought off a totalitarian menace to keep our country free, it seems we have surrendered our individual sovereignty and the right to choose for ourselves and prosper, falling for the age-old tyrant's ruse of 'wanting to protect its citizens' and constantly telling us 'it's for your own good' as we are herded and restricted.

Not only is this parliament quickly shaping up to be similar to that of the Reichstag's in 1933-45, it seems it is determined to far surpass all other lapdogs to tyranny in history.

Following on quickly from the disturbing Covert Human Intelligence Sources Act passed on March 1st, which allows many state agents and their nominated 'informants' to commit most crimes against individuals if it helps the state protect its interests, the Police, Sentencing, Courts and Crime Bill, dubbed the 'anti-protest' bill, has now passed its 3rd reading in the Commons and is set to move to the Lords and doubtless the statute books with little opposition from anyone interested in defending the rights of the ultimate minority - the individual man, woman or child.

In summary, the bill will allow police to prevent any form of protest, and imposes outrageously tough sentences on those convicted of 'being a public nuisance'. It will also make trespass a crime and effectively outlaw travelling, wild camping, vanlife and anything else where you cannot be spied on, tracked and controlled.

Are we surprised this piece of legislation to make Stalin and Pol Pot envious has been put through parliament while the nation was distracted by England's toils in the Euro football championships?

Would it have made any difference if it had been another distracting spectacle keeping people's eyes and minds off the draconian laws being put in place to remove the last vestiges of our freedoms while they remain asleep and oblivious to the world we are leaving for our children?

Now, not only do they have the legal basis for the total perpetual control of all mankind, they also have the technology, all mostly willingly used by us, and further being enhanced and 'upgraded' every day, with all means of remaining free rapidly disappearing.

Think about everything moving online, everything connected, and the eventual disappearance of cash - it will mean that these regimes will be able to rule us remotely, and with no means of surviving for those who do not prepare now to live outside of this digital prison. They are creating willing slaves, sleepwalking future generations into abject poverty, misery and control. While it's most certainly a conspiracy, one only needs to look at the laws that have already passed to know this is certainly no theory. Surely at enforced vaccinations for millions the line is now drawn?

The choice is yours, if only for a very brief time.

All claims about ‘viruses’ as pathogens are false

MY thesis is not complex: all claims about viruses as pathogens are false and based on easily recognised, understandable, and verifiably false interpretations.

The true causes of the diseases and phenomena attributed to viruses have a different explanation, and one that is much clearer than the current prevalent pseudo-explanations.

This is because, while scientists in laboratories think they are working with viruses, in fact they are only working with certain components of dying tissues or cells acquired under very special circumstances. Their basic belief is that these tissues and cells die because they are infected with a virus.

In reality, these laboratory tissues and cells die because they are starved and poisoned as a result of the methodology of testing itself.

Virologists mainly believe in the existence of viruses because they administer to the tissues and cells supposedly ‘infected’ blood, saliva, or other presumably ‘infected’ body fluids, and this, it must be emphasised, is on top of the cessation of nutrient solution and after the initiation of poisoning by toxic antibiotics.

The great insight, however, is that the tissue and those cells would also die, and do so completely on their own – even without the addition of the supposedly ‘infected’ materials.

Virologists don’t get this! By the most basic scientific standards, they should have at least conducted control tests to be sure that it was really ‘viruses’ that led to cell and tissue death. In order to effectively establish the alleged ‘multiplication’ of viruses in cells, they should have conducted additional tests in a control group administering sterile substances from core healthy people. This would be to check that it was not the method itself that produced or falsified the results.

These control experiments have never been carried out to date.

In the light of the measles-virus process, I did have these control experiments performed, and in an independent lab, with the result that the tissue and the cells indeed die by themselves just as well as if they had come into contact with so-called ‘infected’ material.

by DR STEFAN LANKA

This seems to me to be an important finding, but on the other hand it is also trivial since it is precisely the task of control experiments to rule out the possibility that the method or technique used is not responsible for the result rather than the reality itself.

Control experiments are thus of the highest priority and are even a basic condition for a result to be considered ‘scientific’. As we shall see, the court-appointed expert on the measles virus trial – Dr Podbielski, see further in this article – found that some basic publications of fundamental importance to virology as a whole (notably John Franklin Enders’ June 1954 paper, and six more articles thereafter), contained no control experiments.

From this we can draw the conclusion that since then, and without really realising it, scientists have been acting extremely unscientifically. The explanation for this action, which is incompatible with scientific reasoning, is historical: in June 1954 an unscientific and contradictory hypothesis was published, concluding from the death of tissue in a test tube the presence of a virus.

Six months later, on December 10, 1954, the first author of this hypothesis received the Nobel Prize in medicine. This turned a speculative hypothesis into virtually ‘scientific fact’ in the eyes of many, and one that is not questioned to this day. Since then, the death of tissues and cells in a test tube is consistently but erroneously viewed as evidence of the existence of viruses.

So it is really quite simple: the death of tissues and cells is mistakenly considered to be the isolation of a virus. Thus, whatever else one may claim, the fact remains that a virus was never isolated in the true sense of the word – that is: shown as a whole or characterised biochemically.

The electron microscopic photographs of alleged viruses, for example, in reality show just regular particles of dying tissues and cells, usually at most in model form. However, since those involved BELIEVE that these dying tissues and cells are viruses, this dying of cells and tissues in the form of all kinds of cellular parts is also called the “multiplication” of viruses.

The parties involved believe this to this day, and, to repeat, especially because the inventor of this method, by winning the Nobel Prize, is still considered an authority. Questioning that authority is not even considered.

It is important to note that this same mixture, which is thus made up of dying tissues and cells from monkeys, fetuses from cattle and toxic antibiotics, is no different in any way from what is called a ‘living vaccine’. It is used without purging it of everything non-virus (of everything that is, since viruses do not exist) as a supposedly healing injection, on the assumption that it would consist of ‘attenuated’ viruses. However, it consists mainly of foreign proteins, nucleic acids (DNA/RNA), cytotoxic antibiotics, microbes and spores of all kinds.

Thus, a vaccine is nothing more than a mixture of cellular waste and bacteria. In other words, components that a normal body would immediately excrete. This mixture is therefore toxic. It is what the body secretes as waste. It is mainly injected into the muscles of children during the vaccination process, in an amount that, if injected into the vein, would certainly lead to immediate death.

Only with total ignorance and blind faith in the state authorities who ‘test’ and approve vaccines can this be described as ‘a little harmless prick’. These verifiable facts demonstrate the danger and negligence of the scientists and politicians who claim that vaccines are safe, have little to no side effects, and protect against disease.

None of this is true and provable; on the contrary, if you look at it scientifically, you will find no benefits of vaccines, and there is simply no evidence for the claim that they protect you.

It should be emphasised that an actual, completely described virus does not exist in the entire ‘scientific’ literature. This is because the process of arriving at such a description is by consensus, with the parties involved traditionally arguing over what does and does not belong to the virus. This has taken decades with the measles virus, for example.

In the case of the so-called new Chinese Coronavirus 2019 (now renamed 2019-nCoV), this consensus process strangely took only a few mouse clicks. However, this is not surprising when you know that constituents are indeed extracted from dead tissues that then end up in a database. It is these components, which can come from many different organisms, that are finally assembled into an artificial virus model.

The process is as follows: from a database containing the molecular structures of nucleic acid components – again, it should be emphasised that these already come from dead tissues and cells that have themselves been biochemically manipulated – a number of these are selected and used to construct a much longer, so-called ‘complete’ DNA strand of a new virus.

Much can be said about this ‘technique’, but the basic insight is that these manipulations, called ‘alignments’, simply do not correspond to any ‘complete’ or known genetic material of a virus. Yet this is then referred to in the literature as its ‘genome’.

For the sake of convenience they ignore the fact that during the construction of a ‘viral DNA strand’ – I mean this completely conceptually, in fact nothing is ‘constructed’ – certain sequences that are considered ‘unsuitable’ are smoothed out and missing sequences (at least missing from the conceptual model that one maintains) are added.

Thus, in this way, a genetic DNA sequence is invented. It has never been discovered as a whole and therefore didn’t exist until it was created by man. These ‘smoothings’ and additions form, with short pieces that do fit the conceptual model, a larger whole that is then called ‘a viral DNA strand’. Again, in reality this does not exist; it only exists in the minds of the ‘scientists’.

An example: If you study the conceptual composition of the DNA strand of the measles ‘virus’ and compare it to the actually available short fragments of the cells’ own molecules, more than half of the molecule particles that should make up this virus are missing. Some of these were even artificially added biochemically while the rest are just... made up.

I am not inventing this. This is reality, but because no one even dares to suspect that they are working so amateurishly, no one thinks to check this out properly, and so the illusion persists.

The Chinese scientists, who thus claim that the majority of the nucleic acids, from which the genome of the new China Corona Virus 2019 has been ‘sequenced’, are largely derived from the DNA of venomous snakes, are, like all of us, victims of a by now global misdirection. The more ‘viral’ DNA strands are invented in the way previously described, the more similar a new ‘virus’ is to everything that has been ‘established’ before.

That’s right. So there is ironically method in error. But just because you come up with a theory, within which everything is consistent, doesn’t mean that theory is true. All you are doing is fooling yourself; you may be moving yourself comfortably within this theory – you even call it science and claim that it represents reality – but really the impression of consistency springs only from the congruence of your thinking with that of your predecessors. At the root, illusion continues to reign, and it springs from an invalid experiment.

UK media's covid reporting failings exposed

Former editor also condemns 'deeply disturbing' censorship and silence

A GROUP of alarmed and frustrated UK journalists have pointed to disturbing and colossal failings of their own industry to reveal the true facts about the covid 'pandemic'.

They say the past 18 months have seen constant censorship by media bosses and colleagues, denying the public the real story.

The group, called 'Holding the Line, Journalists Against Covid Censorship', claimed that since March 2020 the UK media has:

- frequently published fear-inducing and sometimes inaccurate news coverage;
- undermined initiatives such as the Great Barrington Declaration that offer alternatives to the Government's covid-19 mitigation policies, while hit pieces have been commissioned targetting scientists who dissent from the dominant covid-19 narrative;

- helped foster what is now emerging as a hostile environment for people who choose not to have a covid-19 vaccine.

The group, involving a couple of dozen people in Great Britain and Ireland, is made up of journalists from multiple sectors including press, broadcast, freelance and PR.

Significantly, they say they are concerned that much of the UK media is turning a blind eye to covid-19 data and analysis that challenges the Government narrative.

It also alleges that the UK Media has often failed to:

- provide proper context for statistics on covid-19 'cases' and deaths;
- give due coverage to the alternative treatments such as Ivermectin, Fluvoxamine, Hydroxychloroquine and EXO-CD24;
- enquire into the methodology of the PCR process, particularly its suitability as a diagnostic test, and the cycle thresholds at which they are run;
- provide a balanced account of the cost and impact of the lockdown policy;
- give serious attention to (when not downplaying) instances of adverse reactions to the covid-19 vaccination, including death (few media platforms reference data from the Government's Yellow

by GRAEME SMITH

Card vaccine injury reporting scheme, for example);

- report on and condemn the routine censorship by tech giants of dissenting voices and opinions;
- 'follow the money' by subjecting the interconnected political, financial, philanthropic and industrial interests responsible for the covid-19 programme to sustained and proper scrutiny.

The forum, highlighted on UK Column News on July 7, is reportedly 'building a head of steam'.

At that point it had not established a website but had got its first statements out, berating the British media for what it has done in the past 17 months.

Graham Crawford, a former award-winning Scottish weekly newspaper editor, told The Light: "I'm not a member of this group but its formation and statements are long overdue.

"I'm trying not to be angry and instead be grateful they are finally speaking out, but I can't help but ask – what the hell have these people been doing this past year?

"Where have they been? And what on earth is going on with the rest of this once honourable industry? How do they sleep at night – or are they just totally stupid and question nothing?

"And do they really think it is reasonable to terrorise a population daily for 17 months? Do they not know they are causing

Gates & Soros invest $40 million in covid testing

by WEAVER & TYLER DURDEN

A CONSORTIUM of investors led by the Soros Economic Development Fund (SEDF) and the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation are buying UK-based covid testing company Mologic, which has developed a 10-minute coronavirus test and is best known for its deep-nostril swab test for the disease.

According to Forbes, citing a Monday press release, the buyout was done to increase access to "affordable state-of-the-art medical technology" via a rapid 'lateral flow' test, which offers an early-warning screening for covid-19, as negative tests are going to be increasingly required to go back to 'normal life' - along with one's vaccine passport of course.

The Gates-Soros collaboration is part of a new initiative, Global Access Health (GAH), which will invest "at least" $41 million in the deal, according to the statement. The transaction will feature a buyout of all Mologic's existing shares - including investments held by Foresight Group LLP and Calculus Capital.

This isn't the first time Gates and Soros have collaborated. In 2015, a Jeffrey Epstein funded think tank, the International Peace Institute, hosted a "Preparing for Pandemics" conference in Geneva - with senior officials from the Gates Foundation, Open Society, WHO, CDC, Red Cross and Pasteur Institute in attendance.

There's only one reason Mr

Gates would bother to put money into this company, and that is to return a vast profit. The only way he will do that is through the continuation of the covid-19 fraud that has infected the lives of people across the world for the past seventeen months.

Mologic is a UK-based lateral flow test developer which has created 10-minute covid tests. Gates and Soros hope that the tests will cost as little as $1 to produce.

Soros and Gates are part of the billionaire community looking to direct their philanthropic efforts to the so-called global south, referring broadly to the regions of Latin America, Asia, Africa and Oceania that many fear will be left behind as the more affluent West accelerates its program of vaccinations, testing and 'biosecure bubbles' in the years ahead. Sean Hinton, the CEO of the Soros fund, said in a statement that the pandemic has "painfully demonstrated the fundamental inequities" in global public health, adding that this "unique transaction" has brought philanthropic funds and investors together to address the issue.

Roxana Bonnell, a public health expert from Soros' Open Society Foundations, which claims to be the world's largest private funder of human rights and social justice advocacy groups, said: "As we have seen during the covid-19 pandemic, access to testing is absolutely essential when it comes to containing the spread of contagious disease—an issue that ultimately affects us all".

enormous psychological harm?

"The failings of the UK media in its covid reporting have been screaming out at us since last spring.

"Today's journalists do not investigate. They merely regurgitate state propaganda. They are shameless.

"It has torn me apart to witness what has gone on.

"I find it deeply worrying and disturbing. The media was always the last sanctuary and saviour of truth-tellers and whistleblowers, and never has that been needed more.

"But where do the good people go now to hope to right a wrong? Certainly not the BBC, ITV or Channel 4. Certainly not any of the mainstream press.

"How is the vast majority of the population going to finally learn of the colossal lies they have been told? The media is hardly likely to put itself in the dock.

"These are dark and very disturbing times".

Medical research thoroughly corrupted

Covid-19... the final nail in the coffin

SEVERAL years ago, I wrote a book called Doctoring Data to help people navigate their way through medical headlines and data.

I wrote it because I was deeply concerned that medical science had been taken over by commercial interests. Much of the (research) data was enormously biased, thus corrupted, and I wanted to show how bias gets built in.

I was not alone in my concerns. John Ioannidis wrote the very highly cited paper 'Why most Published Research Findings are False' back in 2005. It has been read by many thousands of researchers, so they can't say they don't know.

Marcia Angell, who edited the New England Journal of Medicine for twenty years, wrote:

"It is simply no longer possible to believe much of the clinical research that is published, or to rely on the judgement of 'trusted' physicians or 'authoritative' medical guidelines. I take no pleasure in this conclusion, which I reached slowly and reluctantly over my two decades as an editor of the NEJM."

From Peter Gotzsche's book, 'Deadly Medicine and Organised Crime':

"The main reason we take so many drugs is that drug companies

don't sell drugs, they sell lies about drugs... virtually everything we know about drugs is what the companies have chosen to tell us and our doctors... if you don't believe the system is out of control, please e-mail me and explain why drugs are the third leading cause of death."

Richard Smith, former editor of the British Medical Journal:

"Twenty years ago, the statistician Doug Altman published an editorial in the BMJ arguing that much medical research was of poor quality and misleading. He wrote that it was seriously flawed through inappropriate designs, unrepresentative/small sample, incorrect methods of analysis and interpretation... Twenty years later, I feel that things are not better, but worse..."

In 2002 I wrote a book on medical journals. My confidence that 'things can only get better' largely drained away.

Medical research has inexorably turned into a very lucrative industry. Medical journals charge authors thousands of dollars to publish their research.

It is all very profitable for big publishing houses. The Return on Investment (profit) is around 35%. Pharmaceutical companies can afford the publication fees but it is very difficult for any researcher not supported by a university or pharmaceutical company to publish anything unless they are independently wealthy.

Driven by financial imperative, the research has inevitably become biased. He who pays the paper, calls the tune.

A naïve researcher published a scientific article in a respectable journal. She thought her article was straightforward and defensible. It used only publicly available data and her findings were consistent with much of the literature on the

by DR. MALCOLM KENDRICK

topic. Her co-authors included two distinguished statisticians.

To her surprise her publication was met with unusual attacks from unexpected sources within the research community. These attacks were not pursued through normal channels of scientific discussion. Her research became the target of an aggressive campaign of insults, errors, misinformation, social media posts, gossip and complaints to her employer.

The goal appeared to be to undermine and discredit her work. The controversy was deliberately manufactured and the attacks primarily consisted of repeated assertions of preconceived opinions. She learned first-hand the antagonism that could be provoked by inconvenient scientific findings.

Development of public health policy and clinical recommendations is complex and needs to be evidence-based rather than belief-based. Guidelines and recommendations should be based on objective and unbiased data.

Where is science in all this?

I don't mind attacks on ideas. I like robust debate. Science can only progress through a process of new hypotheses being proposed, attacked, refined and strengthened – or obliterated. But what we see now is the obliteration of science itself.

Anyone who has been a scientist for more than 20 years will realise that there has been a progressive decline in the honesty of communications between scientists and their institutions and the outside world.

Science must be an area where truth is the rule or else the activity stops being scientific and becomes something else: Zombie science, a science that is dead but artificially sustained by a continual infusion of funding. From a distance, Zombie science looks like the real thing but it is not interested in the pursuit of truth - it is externally controlled and everything inside it is rotten.

"Scientists push the envelope of exaggeration, selectivity and distortion as far as possible and tolerance for this kind of untruthfulness has greatly increased over recent years. It is routine for scientists to 'hype' their status and 'spin' the importance of their research." - Bruce Charlton, Professor of Theoretical Medicine.

When covid-19 came along, the distortion and hype became so outrageous that I almost gave up trying to establish what was true, and what was just made up nonsense.

I stated right at the start that vitamin D could be important in protecting against the disease and recommended vitamin C for those already in hospital. I was attacked by fact checkers, along with anyone else promoting vitamins to reduce the risk of covid-19 infection. Vitamin C is known to have powerful healing activity. It has been known for years.

As of today, any criticism of the mainstream narrative is simply being removed. Those who dare to raise their heads above the parapet have them chopped off.

Where does the censorship and punishment end? Well, we know where it ends.

We are heading for some form of totalitarian state, where dissent against the medical 'experts' will be punishable by imprisonment. We are already in a situation where doctors who fail to follow 'guidelines' can be sued or struck off.

The ‘Nazification’ of the NHS

THE coordinated command-and-control over society called Gleichschaltung was the deadly regime of subjugation in 1930s German totalitarianism, later known as ‘Nazification’.

Since 2020, the UK government has empowered its own coordinated command-and-control regime to ‘Nazify’ the NHS.

The aim is to force health services to conform to government ‘covid-19’ contagion propaganda. This modern day Nazification provides the means for exerting total power over the general population and healthcare professionals.

These unprecedented measures are occurring alongside the permeation through society of the ideas and prejudices relating to ‘covid 19 contagion’ with tyrannical legislation mandating the medical testing, isolation and removal of anyone to wherever the national or local authorities determine.

The Health Protection (Coronavirus) Regulations Act 2020 was an extreme mandate enabling the government to force anyone to produce documents to assist ‘health assessment’, and provide biological samples of respiratory secretions or blood.

Under its wording, individuals must allow health officials immediate contact (e.g. home entry) to reduce or remove any perceived risk of infection or contamination.

The experimental injections (misnamed ‘covid-19 vaccinations’) could now via this legislation be similarly mandated for all healthcare staff and not just for those in care homes.

Since January 2020, health services have been redesigned. Millions of officially designated ‘non-urgent’ services and scheduled operations have been cancelled or stalled. Capacity has been redirected and deployed to create a two-tier system fuelled by contagion propaganda.

This medical apartheid operates whenever patients attend a healthcare facility or call in via their GP, 999, 111 etc. They are processed through a skewed and biased system which separates patients based on ‘respiratory’ or ‘non-respiratory’ symptoms. This is not the usual medical triage: it is a new, abnormal, skewed, biased and bastardised version.

Any patients identified as ‘respiratory’ will attract a greater likelihood of receiving a presumptive ‘covid-19 diagnosis’ based on perceived symptoms/signs without any actual test results/physical evidence; or a confirmed ‘covid-19 diagnosis’ based on highly variable/interpretive tests. This skewed ‘covid-19-triage’ exposes the unwitting patient to further potential for continuing misdiagnosis and unnecessary medical intervention(s).

by DR. KEVIN CORBETT

Statistics are used to inflate the false perception of an out-of-control epidemic. This helps manufacture the ‘pseudo-epidemic’ using real patients as fodder to bump up the numbers and legitimise medical apartheid.

The accuracy of the medical tests used to diagnose the ‘novel coronavirus’ (‘SARS-Cov-2’) has never been scientifically proven. ‘SARS-CoV-2’ is only claimed to cause a ‘new’ disease, ‘covid-19’.

Both the minute blood clots and iron-haemoglobin dissociation reported in those dying with a ‘covid-19’ diagnosis are as likely due to electromagnetic radiation as they are to any alleged ‘novel coronavirus’.

Just like the dangerously experimental covid-19 injections, the ‘covid-19’ tests were fast-tracked and given emergency licenses, avoiding any standard safety assessments. This enabled their immediate use irrespective of their validity, reliability and safety; so guaranteeing liability-free billions for Big Pharma.

This corrupt process meant that Public Health England (PHE) shelved purifying/isolating their own live sample of ‘SARS-CoV-2’. So far according to the PCR test designers in January 2020, only a set of so-called theoretical genes was produced (in silico modelled) via a computer algorithm.

So, we still do not have any live sample of an actual virus cleaned of human cellular debris. This was the first major reason why 22 international scientists in December 2020 co-authored a paper exposing this ‘test’ (see: <https://cormandrostenreview.com/report/>).

In April 2020, the World Health Organisation (WHO) instructed all national health agencies that ‘virus isolation is not recommended as a routine diagnostic procedure’.

Why? Was the WHO ignoring the embarrassing fact that the so-called ‘novel coronavirus’ was never isolated/purified? This also implies that the PCR test design is likewise corrupted. What real entity is this ‘test’ actually identifying?

There is no constitutional precedent or governing mandate for a globalist agency like the WHO to direct our health care. It is criminal that parliament has allowed this misdirection of PHE.

Fear and hysteria is fueled by ‘covid-19’ contagion propaganda and vice versa. It is misdirecting clinical

Some of the many ways countless families continue to experience these medical perversions staff towards making ‘covid-19’ the ‘diagnosis-of-choice’. It is surely also wrong that everyone is now considered to be an asymptomatic ‘Typhoid Mary’, spreading a presumed disease, as shown by the infamous government fear campaign, ‘Anyone Can Have It. Anyone Can Transmit It’.

A government-created list of generic symptoms is fed via these hysterical campaigns to both public and health professionals alike. They include common non-fatal phenomena: sore throats, runny noses, coughs, feeling hot etc. This weaponises people’s everyday experiences, creating contagion fear and loathing, promoting widespread paranoia and more hysteria. These are nondescript symptoms repackaged officially as ‘covid-19 disease’.

These hysterical perceptions of ‘covid’ symptoms are further inflated by fear porn soundbites and phrases such as ‘killer virus’. They fuel the sinister mechanism driving health professionals to knowingly or unknowingly misdiagnose ‘covid-19’ in the absence of any accurate tests or physical findings. These misperceptions also coerce people into submitting to experimental injections which are causing incredible harm to subjects. Many will buckle, fearful of future illness and travel bans.

These biased, corrupted and bastardised processes are now enshrined in every day medical practice. They are perverting the normal ‘differential diagnosis’ and are bolstering and magnifying the official statistics of the covid pseudo-epidemic.

The true accuracy of any ‘covid test’ is scientifically unknown because no medical gold standard exists to underwrite their use (see: <https://www.bmj.com/content/369/bmj.m1808>). This means that the ‘covid PCR test’ is untrustworthy. Unwitting patients are deceived into receiving a dodgy diagnosis (+ or -). If ‘diagnosed’ positive, more and more unnecessary (and potentially dangerous) drugs are likely to be given.

Stopping face-to-face medical examinations to discourage physical touch via online consultations (‘telemedicine’) is another perversion of normal practice. Safe medical diagnosis must involve physical examination using touch and non-isolation of patients unless a true high consequence infectious disease exists (which the government says ‘covid-19’ is not).

The implications of such misdiagnoses are serious and unremitting. Deaths and illnesses are fraudulently created in the absence of real disease. Illnesses are then induced by medically unwarranted administration of unnecessary drugs and actions (e.g. ventilation, injections etc.), a process called iatrogenesis. This is why the Hippocratic Oath implies that all doctors hold a double-edged sword over us – they can both kill and cure.

Covid Nazification dupes patients into receiving unwarranted drugs and treatments. In chronic and terminal illnesses, patients’ deaths are reportedly being hastened by over drugging on ‘end-of-life pathways’ using sedatives like Midazolam.

Instead of receiving oxygen via masks or nebulisers, acutely-ill patients are subjected to unwarranted and invasive oxygen-delivery tubes (‘intubation’), necessitating the continuous mechanical pumping of oxygen into their lungs (‘mechanical ventilation’).

These are some of the most hazardous treatments any patient can receive. When unwarranted, they can only injure people causing respiratory and kidney failure, and failure of major organ systems (‘multi-organ failure’). This ultimately hastens or actually causes death.

Routine Nazified practices within misnamed ‘care’ pathways now exist in the same untrustworthy health ‘care’ system for which people applauded and displayed rainbows.

Pre-covid this National Death Service caused: 250+ murders (Dr Harold Shipman); 1,200 ‘deaths’ (Mid Staffordshire Hospital); and 450+ ‘deaths’ (Gosport War Memorial Hospital). How many more deaths have been, and are still being caused in the name of ‘covid-19’?

The covid-19 ‘contagion propaganda’ is Nazifying health services to the extreme point where unethical practices once seen as highly abnormal are increasingly being accepted as the norm.

The only moral way of halting this Covid Nazification is to once again place people and ethics above science and technology.

Letter to physicians: Four new scientific discoveries regarding the safety and efficacy of covid-19 vaccines

DOCTORS For Covid Ethics has sent the following letter to tens of thousands of doctors in Europe, summarising four recent scientific findings critical to the covid-19 vaccination program.

Dear Colleague:

Four recent scientific discoveries are herewith brought to your urgent attention. They alter the entire landscape of the covid-19 pandemic, and they force us to reassess the merits of vaccination against SARS-CoV-2.

Summary

Rapid and efficient memory-type immune responses occur reliably in virtually all unvaccinated individuals who are exposed to SARS-CoV-2. The effectiveness of further boosting the immune response through vaccination is therefore highly doubtful. Vaccination may instead aggravate disease through antibody-dependent enhancement (ADE).

Discovery 1:

SARS-CoV-2 spike protein circulates shortly after vaccination

SARS-CoV-2 proteins were measured in longitudinal plasma samples collected from 13 participants who received two doses of Moderna mRNA-1273 vaccine [1]. With 11 of the 13, the SARS-CoV-2 spike protein was detected in the blood within only one day after the first vaccine injection.

Significance.

Spike protein molecules were produced within cells that are in contact with the bloodstream—mostly endothelial cells—and released into the circulation. This means that a) the immune system will attack those endothelial cells, and b) the circulating spike protein molecules will activate thrombocytes. Both effects will promote blood clotting. This explains the many clotting-related adverse events—stroke, heart attack, venous thrombosis—that are being reported after vaccination.

Discovery 2:

Rapid, memory-type antibody response after vaccination

Several studies have demonstrated that circulating SARS-CoV-2-specific IgG and IgA antibodies became detectable within 1-2 weeks after application of mRNA vaccines [1–3].

Significance.

Rapid production of IgG and IgA always indicates a secondary, memory-type response that is elicited by doctors4covidethics.org

through re-stimulation of pre-existing immune cells. Primary immune responses to novel antigens take longer to evolve and initially produce IgM antibodies, which is then followed by the isotype switch to IgG and IgA.

A certain amount of IgM was indeed detected alongside IgG and IgA in some studies [1,4]. Importantly, however, IgG rose faster than IgM [4], which confirms that the early IgG response was indeed of the memory type. This memory response indicates pre-existing, cross-reactive immunity due to previous infection with ordinary respiratory human coronavirus strains. The delayed IgM response most likely represents a primary response to novel epitopes which are specific to SARS-CoV-2.

Memory-type responses have also been documented with respect to T-cell-mediated immunity [5–7]. Overall, these findings indicate that our immune system efficiently recognizes SARS-CoV-2 as “known” even on first contact. Severe cases of the disease thus cannot be ascribed to lacking immunity. Instead, severe cases might very well be caused or aggravated by pre-existing immunity through antibody-dependent enhancement (ADE, see below).

Discovery 3:

SARS-CoV-2 elicits robust adaptive immune responses regardless of disease severity

Serum antibody profiles were reported for 203 individuals following SARS-CoV-2 infection [8]. 202 (>99%) of the participants exhibited SARS-CoV-2 specific antibodies. With 193 individuals (95%), these antibodies prevented SARS-CoV-2 infection in cell culture and also inhibited binding of the spike protein to the ACE2 receptor. Furthermore, CD8+ T-cell responses specific for SARS-CoV-2 were clear and quantifiable in 95 of 106 (90%) HLA-A2-positive individuals.

Significance.

This study confirms the above assertion that the immune response to initial contact with SARS-CoV-2 is of the memory type. In addition, it shows that this reaction occurs with almost all individuals, and particularly also with those who experience no manifest clinical symptoms.

The goal of the vaccination is to stimulate production of antibodies to SARS-CoV-2, but we now know that such antibodies can and will be rapidly generated by everyone upon the slightest viral challenge, even without vaccination.

Severe lung infections always take many days to develop, which means that if the antibodies generated by the memory response are needed, they will arrive on time. Therefore, vaccination is unlikely to provide significant benefit with respect to the prevention of severe lung infection.

Discovery 4:

Rapid increase of spike protein antibodies after the second injection of mRNA vaccines

IgG and IgA antibody titres were monitored before vaccination and after the first and the second injection of mRNA vaccines [3]. Antibody titres rose with some delay after the first injection, then plateaued, but rose again very shortly after the second injection.

Significance.

Even though the antibody response to the first injection is of the memory type, the small time lag after the injection may mitigate adverse reactions, because the abundance of spike protein on the cells in the blood vessel walls and in other tissues may have already passed its peak when the antibodies arrive.

The situation changes dramatically with the second injection. Then the spikes are produced and protrude into the bloodstream that is already swarming with both reactive lymphocytes and antibodies. The antibodies will cause the complement system [9,10] and also neutrophil granulocytes to attack the spike protein-bearing cells. The possible consequences of all-out self-attack by the immune system are frightening.

Antibody-dependent enhancement of disease

As described, memory-type immune responses ensure the rapid rise of antibody titres after initial exposure to SARS-CoV-2, rendering the benefit of vaccine-induced antibody response exceedingly doubtful. Regardless, we should not assume that high antibody titres against SARS-CoV-2 will always improve the clinical outcome. With several virus families—in particular with Dengue virus, but also with coronaviruses—antibodies can aggravate rather than mitigate disease. This occurs because certain cells of the immune system take up antibody-tagged microbes and destroy them. If a virus particle to which antibodies have bound is taken up by such a cell, but it then manages to evade destruction, it may instead start to multiply within the cell. Overall, the antibody will then have enhanced the replication of the virus. Clinically, this antibody-dependent enhancement (ADE) can cause a hyperinflammatory response (a “cytokine storm”) that will amplify the damage to the lungs, liver and other organs of the body.

Attempts to develop vaccines to the original SARS virus, which is closely related to SARS-CoV-2, repeatedly failed due to ADE. The vaccines did induce antibodies, but when the vaccinated animals were subsequently infected with the virus, they became more ill than the unvaccinated controls (see e.g. [11]). The possibility of ADE was not adequately addressed in the clinical trials on any of the covid-19 vaccines. It is therefore prudent to avoid the danger of inducing ADE through vaccination and instead rely on proven forms of treatment [12] for dealing with clinically severe covid-19 disease.

The collective findings discussed above clearly show that the benefits of vaccination are highly doubtful. In contrast, the harm the vaccines do is very well substantiated, with more than 15,000 vaccination-associated deaths now documented in the EU drug adverse events database (EudraVigilance), and over 7,000 more deaths within the UK and the US [13].

Why Big Tech is the enemy of freedom

THERE has never been a better demonstration of Lord Acton's famous dictum 'Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power corrupts absolutely' than the rise to worldwide business dominance of the American Tech corporations (Facebook, Apple, Twitter, Microsoft, Amazon, Google) and their dangerous extension of that wealth into political power over democratic parties, governments and the whole of public discourse.

Apple has an annual turnover of $274.5bn and is valued at $2 trillion. Only seven countries in the world have a higher GDP than that.

Like the other U.S. big tech firms, Apple dominates countries, parks profits in tax havens and dictates terms to countries and its suppliers. It recently exploited its power by forcing its suppliers to accept 60-day

by RODNEY ATKINSON

payment terms up from 45 days, and payment only if their goods sold – not received by Apple (i.e. they carry the cost of Apple's stock).

Suppliers told the press they had no choice but to accept if they wanted their businesses to continue. These terms are little more than corporate slavery.

So it came as no surprise that free speech platform Parler became a victim of Apple's political power and bias when it was taken down from Apple's App Store.

This was despite the fact that the App Store carries Twitter and Facebook, both of which have been used repeatedly by Antifa, Black Lives Matter, and other groups to coordinate acts of violence and lawlessness across the United States.

Rose City Antifa, a group which has repeatedly supported acts of violence and disorder in Portland, Oregon, still has an active page on Facebook with more than 20,000 'likes'.

The Parler website itself was taken down altogether by Amazon, another multinational behemoth flexing its political muscle.

John Matze, Parler CEO, rightly pointed to Apple hypocrisy: "Anyone who buys an Apple phone is apparently a user. Apparently they believe Parler is responsible for all user-generated content on Parler. Therefore, by the same logic, Apple must be responsible for all actions taken by their phones. Every car bomb, every illegal cell phone conversation, every illegal crime committed on an iPhone.

Standards not applied to Twitter, Facebook, or even Apple themselves, apply to Parler."

The extent of the incitement to far left violence by Big Tech is clear from the fact that Matze and his family have had to go into hiding.

The blatantly political nature of Apple's attack on Parler is clear. Matze said Amazon had assured them there was no problem. But then they seemed to worry Trump having been forced off Twitter, would go to Parler... so they took it down.

Amazon took down websites, like Parler, which exposed electoral fraud, mainly associated with postal voting. But strangely enough, that same Amazon won't tolerate postal voting by its own workforce, as to whether they should unionise – because they know it is open to fraud.

So the award for political hypocrite of the years goes to Amazon's Jeff Bezos, one of the richest men in the world.

Twitter removed President Trump from their platform but not of course the Bidens or Kamala Harris or Nancy Pelosi for encouraging far left violence last year. Equally Twitter apparently has no problems with its use by Iranian religious extremists or Chinese Communism.

Apple also told Parler that material 'intended to incite violence or other lawless acts has never been acceptable on the App Store', but on the day Apple censored Parler 'Hang Mike Pence' trended on Twitter.

Twitter is clearly allowing its users to coordinate criminal acts on the platform, with dozens of tweets identifying looting targets in the USA still on the platform, despite the fact that the site was notified by concerned citizens.

During the US Senate enquiry into the power of U.S. Big Tech, Senator Ted Cruz asked the CEO of Twitter, Jack Dorsey: "Who the hell elected you?"

Who indeed? That is the point. These imperial corporate dictators are in no way constrained by voters or parliamentary scrutiny. They rule by self-appointment, using the collective investment savings of the country to lobby, get favourable tax treatment and buy their political power.

Government primes businesses to enforce medical apartheid

Tyranny is happening before your eyes... and not so subtly

THROUGH numerous perception management techniques employed over the past 18 months by the UK government and its agents, we have arrived at a crucial point in British history.

Despite tens of thousands being allowed to gather for Wimbledon and the Euro football finals, leisure establishments such as pubs, restaurants and music venues are being tacitly encouraged to restrict entry to those who decline to take part in the mass unethical medical experiments being trialled across the world known as 'covid-19 vaccines'.

In effect, a genuine fascist segregation is being put in place in what used to be known as the cradle of liberty and genuine land of the free. This would have been unthinkable a few, short years ago.

by DARREN SMITH

You cannot sue a business for enforcing its own rules. You cannot make a complaint, or seek a judicial review, if the government is not involved in the execution of the policy.

This is a very sly way of removing freedom from the individual, in nations where the rule of law and the ability to redress grievances still supposedly exist for all the people.

You have rights, they are protected by common or natural law, but if you allow people to take those rights then they no longer exist and can usually only be taken back by force.

To those who have taken one or two injections due to the government campaign of psychological terror, ask yourself:

a) Were you fully informed of all the facts surrounding these experimental injections, including the heartbreaking deaths and debilitations they have been causing, sadly censored by mainstream media and internet (which should speak volumes in itself)?

b) Did you take it so you could literally have a passport to freedoms you previously had anyway, such as pubs, clubs, holidays and concerts/cinema etc?

If you stop and think about it, the TV told you there was a pandemic but you never experienced one yourself, and they took away many normal rights and freedoms, saying you can have them back only if you take this shot full of God-knows-what (because no one looks at the list of ingredients, including those administering them).

Isn't that simply criminal blackmail? 'We will give you your freedom back as long as you take part in this giant medical experiment'? It should sound as odd and off-kilter as it does. This is plain WRONG.

It would seem, however, that given the choice, the public still prefer the idea of being free to do what they like, breathe freely, not have to check in and be tracked, traced, monitored, prodded, poked and generally made to feel like a piece of code on a blockchain every five minutes.

They really do want to just be left alone by unnecessarily interfering authorities who seem to want to micromanage every area of our lives, under the false impression that we are incapable of taking care of ourselves perfectly well.

It's hard to believe the real-life Bond villain Klaus Schwab-Rothschild, founder and spokesman for the World Economic Forum which seems to have taken over from the Bilderberg Group, Committee of 300 and Trilateral Commission in directing public policy for the entire world, doesn't give the game away all by himself.

But then, maybe his similarity to screen villains gives the public the impression this isn't really all happening, and we are not being railroaded into digital concentration camps where we will be geo-fenced and highly restricted in what we can do – those who are not sent to the gulag, that is.

It should be alarming to those who still believe they live in a free, democratic society that the agenda is extremely similar to that of the Chinese Communist Party's, which is simply to control every single thing in its power, including the most difficult, mankind.

If you value your freedom and that of your children and future generations, then you will research these things for yourself without prejudice, without the programmed idea that only if information comes from 'establishment authorities' can it be valid.

To do that well, one might accept the very likely possibility that those who own and control all the central and investment banks, the giant corporations, the media, academia and everything else, and have stated their plans of depopulation and total control many times, really don't have you and your family's best interests at heart.

It starts with segregation, and then often ends in genocide.

The rule of lawlessness: C.H.I.S. Act 2021

The Covert Human Intelligence Sources (Criminal Conduct) Act 2021, passed earlier this year, is a green light for crime to be committed by the regime. It allows the state to recruit others, including children, to commit crime as undercover CHIS.

Powers have been given to numerous bodies including police forces, the intelligence agencies, the armed forces, the department of health and social care, the competition and markets authority, the environment agency, the financial conduct authority, the food standards agency and the gambling commission. Serious crimes like torture are not ruled out because members of parliament argued that a gang member might want a CHIS to prove himself by raping someone. They also came up with the flimsy excuse that the Human Rights Act would protect against abuse. So after being raped, murdered or tortured, the victim could decide to face the hell and costs of taking a public authority to court in a civil suit, with no actual possibility of punishment for the offender or handler.

During the debate on amendments in the House of Lords Lord Paddick, a retired police officer and life peer, pointed out: "If ever there was evidence of a government simply giving its operational partners whatever they ask for, whatever the consequences, this Bill is it."

Existing investigatory powers under RIPA have been altered to legitimise the current regime's widespread disregard for the laws and customs of the land Wording is deliberately vague:

"A criminal conduct authorisation is an authorisation for criminal conduct in the course of, or otherwise in connection with, the conduct of a CHIS".

We are supposed to feel fine about this because the officer must believe that the criminal conduct is necessary for national security, for preventing or detecting crime or disorder, or is in the economic interests of the UK. The belief must be 'reasonable'. But what is reasonable to the current regime is idiocy to most. Their idea of a proportional response is shutting down society in case someone gets a sniffle.

This legislation allows for a child or vulnerable adult to wind up not only as a perpetrator, but also as a victim of crime. As Baroness Jones of Moulsecoomb has pointed out:

"This is child abuse by the government, using children as spies, it is obvious this government does not care about the rule of law... it protects its own while throwing others to the dogs".

The excuse for using children and vulnerable adults to commit crimes is that if they don't, criminal gangs will abuse them more. That children will only be used in 'exceptional circumstances' where no harm can be reasonably foreseen and that all this is in the best interests of the child. Harm is defined as physical injury or psychological distress, but psychological damage is not specified. This leaves the possibility of trauma for the child which might only become apparent later.

Lord Bishop of Durham has pointed out: "How can using a child as a CHIS, and in doing so placing them at greater risk of harm, ever be in their best interest? Allowing these children to act illegally only worsens this".

16 and 17 year olds do not even have a right to have an appropriate adult present at meetings. And if a Judicial Commissioner rules that the criminal conduct authorisation is against the law, an officer can ignore this decision and keep the operation going. There is no protection for vulnerable adults that the state wants to use and abuse. The only requirement is to identify and evaluate the possibility of harm to the individual and then do nothing about it, other than making sure they understand the risks. There is nothing to stop a vulnerable person having to take part in terrorist activities or become a suicide bomber. Anyone who is injured or harmed, including the vulnerable adult himself or herself, has no route to redress because the Act prevents access to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 and the Criminal Injuries (NI) order 2002 from taking effect for authorisations involving this group.

There is no excuse for making children or vulnerable people into criminals, or using them as undercover operatives at all. This unconstitutional legislation gives carte blanche for crimes to be committed against anyone the regime dislikes, for example protesters or even their children and family members. As with the Coronavirus Act, here we have more written powers that are unlawful. The Tory party did not include their intention to legalise abuse of children and vulnerable people in its manifesto. Nobody voted for that.

Covert Human Intelligence Sources, draft revised code of practice, January 2021

NHS Nurse: No regrets in standing up and speaking out

I'm Kirsty, an ex-NHS staff nurse. I trained as an RGN in 2008. I have worked and specialised in medicine for the elderly and acute medicine. I started off my career in surgical. I have worked for the NHS nurse bank and with an agency.

I was a charge nurse at the start of the pandemic and questioned protocols and actions of management regarding the safety of patients and staff. I'm a mother of three children and my priority was to keep myself safe so I can be here for them. Initially I was scared due to the mainstream media coverage of the situation, particularly working with elderly patients.

From early 2020, it was obvious to me that the figures were being over exaggerated by the media and politicians as we were not witnessing the overwhelming of local hospitals that was being portrayed. I think most people are now aware that what they were told would happen was a worst-case scenario and designed to make us fearful 'to protect the NHS'.

by KIRSTY MILLER

This year my biggest concern became the injuries I began to witness with the rollout of the vaccines in December. The public may not be aware that as nurses we are not trained in mRNA therapy. There was no training on any of the injections or the range of adverse effects we might expect to see. When I started to voice my concerns to colleagues about what I was witnessing, especially with the rise in the number of patients arriving at hospital with symptoms that could not easily be explained, I was made to feel very uncomfortable, and it soon became clear that this was an environment where those who were questioning the narrative were not welcome, despite what was happening right in front of our eyes.

I understand the real fear that any health professional has of speaking out about any concerns they have and the toll it has emotionally, professionally and socially. It is not easy to speak up.

On March 27th 2021 I finished my last shift, as I could not see myself working for the NHS any longer.

I was so devastated and upset. That evening I made a video which I posted to social media because I wanted the public to know the risks of the vaccines. I also felt it important to make people, including fellow health professionals, aware of the government's Yellow Card Scheme, as it was evident many did not know what this was. It is my core belief that informed consent is vital to everyone who considers taking this trial gene therapy, and that they are made aware that they are taking part in a clinical trial which doesn't end until 2023.

I have so many nurses and other health care professionals contacting me, telling me the fears they have too - they do not want to work any more in these conditions but feel trapped. We all thought we had a secure job and a career for life.

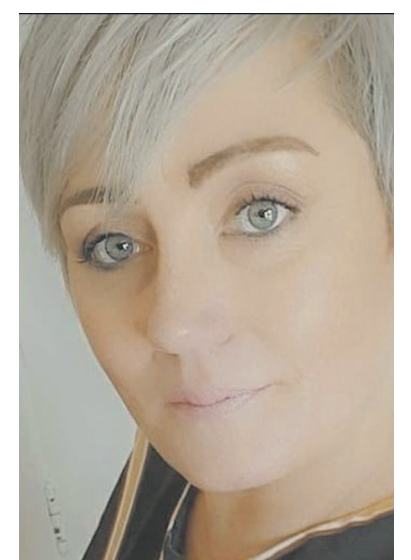

These times are unprecedented, and we were unprepared for what has unfolded. Since March I have been involved in helping agencies support others who are scared for their future. I want to let others know that there IS another way. It is so important that we take control of our own path and change our mindset to be able to continue with our passion for helping others.

I am now branching out into other exciting opportunities that have come my way and have put in place some long-term financial security so that I never have to be worried about supporting my family. I have started retraining with alternative therapies and my crowdfunding campaign has paid for three other nurses to train too.

I have met so many wonderful people on my journey and I am so humbled by the offers of support, being part of a community who are taking control of their own lives and stepping outside the box to do so - there are more ways to be a nurse or doctor than in the NHS! It is simply amazing and refreshing to find people who think like me, and want to help people first.

I have no regrets in standing up and prioritising my patients and speaking out when things are wrong, our code of conduct demands this, as does our own internal conscience.

If any NHS staff would like to know more about the opportunities given to me for sovereignty and peace of mind, then I'm happy to offer support and chat with you.

Movement growing in Scotland

‘Ordinary people scared for democracy.’

THAT is the way in which ‘State of Fear’ Author Laura Dodsworth described those in attendance at the burgeoning political rallies in London in response to what is often lazily called ‘The Covid Crisis’ by the corporate-controlled media and politicians. She was responding to TalkRadio presenter Julia Hartley-Brewer’s assertion that she would be attending a demonstration in London on 26/06/21 for the first time - despite her own misgivings about walking alongside the likes of the ‘anti-vaxxers’. With upper estimates of attendance on the day in the millions, it seems many others had similarly decided that enough was enough after the announced delay to the ‘easing’ of lockdown restrictions on 14th June.

North of the border, close to 1000 gathered for a demonstration at BBC Scotland HQ in Glasgow, in opposition to the proposed rollout of mRNA injections to young children. They marched from the rally point at Glasgow Green, through Argyle Street & the Broomielaw to Pacific Quay, where BBC headquarters are based. Attendees handed out handmade ‘yellow cards’ with contact details and total reported adverse reactions to covid-19 vaccinations to members of the public along the way. It was by all accounts the largest and most successful such event in Scotland to date, following a heavily-policed march through Glasgow’s Southside in April, which attracted the condemnation of First Minister Nicola Sturgeon on Twitter:

“The juxtaposition of this and the catastrophe unfolding in India is quite upsetting. Covid is not a hoax - as more than 10,000 grieving families in Scotland know, it is very real. Thankfully, things are getting better here & restrictions are easing - but we must still take care.”

- Nicola Sturgeon (@NicolaSturgeon) April 24, 2021

The reasoning was that with just a little more restraint Scotland could ‘ease’ into freedom with the first step of the ‘roadmap’ out of lockdown due to begin in May. Freedom held hostage - constrained, conditional and converse to its true nature. It is a concept that the SNP government are unused to and, as been demonstrated during the course of the pandemic, something they are highly skilled at using to their own advantage. Just look at the continued popularity of the party at the polls, winning 64 Parliamentary seats and falling just one seat short of a majority at the most recent Scottish Parliamentary election. This is despite stories such as SNP mis-spending coronavirus relief funds on manifesto promises, and the introduction of the ‘Hate Crime Act’ just before this year’s election - one of the most authoritarian pieces of legislation in Scottish history that will doubtless leave a dark mark over political discourse in the years to come.

Indeed the freedom movement in Scotland has struggled to distinguish itself in the Scottish political milieu that almost forces any new political movement to take a position on the constitutional question. By nature opposed to the SNP government and its covid-19 policies - seemingly competing with the devolved administration in Wales for the harshest and most arbitrary of all the UK devolved and central administrations - it has been an easier fit for those already opposed to the SNP politically. Support for independence in Scotland has been so successfully meshed with support for the dominant political party that it is hard to appeal for any movement outwith the deliberately narrowly-defined political discourse.

First-hand experience at such demonstrations in Scotland will show a much more colourful crowd than the ‘anti-vax’, ‘covid-denier’ bogeyman conjured by media and politicians. Much like Ms Dodsworth’s account of the people in the crowd at London’s events, those in attendance at rallies in Scotland are a diverse mix of young and old, professionals, students, people with disabilities, mums, dads, grandmothers: opposed to covid-19 restrictions and the needless rollout of experimental genetic therapy treatment to children. A prospect that Sturgeon said her “heart sang at the thought of”. And all at the hollow promise of freedom down the line: Scotland all-too-easily forgets that the ‘roadmap’ to it is the second in as many years.

Most cunningly, those campaigning for liberty, truth and transparency in the wake of covid in Scotland, as well as those who have decided to stop complying, now find themselves portrayed as the cause of continued restrictions and by extension, the reason for delaying another independence referendum. The SNP’s 2021 election manifesto promises an independence referendum: “after the covid crisis is over”. (SNP 2021 Manifesto, P.5)

Despite all this, Scotland seems to finally be waking up from its SNP-induced slumber. On 26th, the Scottish Lion roared for the first time in a long while as people have started to realise that winning back individual sovereignty and liberty must come before more lofty propositions, lest they lose the ability to influence such matters altogether. And just as in the case of the covid regulations, people in Scotland are beginning to see that this needn’t be as narrowly or arbitrarily defined as it has been until now.

California pays price of green energy push

SIX months after a historic failure in the Texas power grid which collapsed when various ‘renewable’ sources of electricity failed simultaneously and dragged down the entire network, California has made an urgent request for extra power supplies to avoid blackouts this summer.

It is an extraordinary step after suffering from rolling outages less than a year ago.

State energy officials asked the California Independent System Operator, which runs most of the grid, to contract for additional power capacity for July and August over concerns it will not be able to meet demand during the evening when solar production fades.

Of course, there was a convenient scapegoat on which to blame the collective lack of competence: global warming.

‘California is using all available

by TYLER DURDEN

tools to increase electricity reliability this summer,’ the heads of the California Energy Commission, California Public Utilities Commission, and grid operator said, citing ‘unprecedented climate change-driven heat events, which are occurring throughout the West in combination with drought conditions that reduce hydroelectric capacity’.

Right, it’s always someone else’s fault that you could not properly budget even a few months in advance after keeping millions of people in the dark last year when California again blamed ‘global warming’.

However, if you know there is global warming and you suffer one nightmare summer in the dark because of it, can’t you extrapolate at least a year into the future?

Apparently not.

Their statement underscores California’s challenges as it begins summer already parched by drought that’s leaving hydroelectric reservoirs at historic lows. The state narrowly avoided rolling power outages recently as extreme heat came early; and with few new generation sources on the horizon, supplies tighten when hot weather hits.

The state has taken a number of steps including adding battery storage (a complete disaster last summer) to prevent blackouts such as those last August, when demand overwhelmed the grid. However, it appears that may not be enough.

Procuring additional capacity ‘is taken out of an abundance of caution to ensure electric reliability and preserve the public health and safety of all Californians,’ the officials said.

They also cited delayed availability for some thermal power plants and said some resources expected to be running during the hottest months have now been delayed. Meeting demand is likely to be even harder this year with long-range forecasts suggesting above-average temperatures through September.

What is remarkable is that even Bloomberg, which has been on a crusade to crush non-green sources of power, admits that California’s problem is the state’s aggressive push to cut carbon emissions by shifting to renewable energy.

Many gas-burning plants have closed, which means electricity supplies tighten at sunset as the production from solar generation fades. What’s more, big batteries being built to store solar power during the day and resupply the grid in the evening won’t be available in time for the state’s hottest months.

Is it time to admit that California’s green push has been a complete disaster and could lead to countless deaths during hot, sweaty days?

Of course, since we are talking about a socialist paradise this will never happen, and instead locals have even more brilliant ideas such as paying people not to use electricity.

“The short-term strategy needs to be centred around incentivising demand reductions instead of increasing supply,” said Abe Stanway, of Amperon Holdings Inc., which provides analysis to utilities and power traders. “The best way is to simply pay consumers more to use less during peak events.”

While electricity may not grow on trees in California, at least money still does.

Iranian water riots turn fatal

by TYLER DURDEN

WATER and power shortage protests in Iran have now been raging continuously for weeks, resulting in multiple deaths and injuries particularly out of the restive southwest oil-rich province of Khuzestan, including the death of a police officer.

State media by mid-July reported a death toll of three: ‘According to the state-run IRNA news agency, gunfire killed the officer in the city of Mahshar and another suffered a gunshot wound to his leg,’ the AP reported citing state sources.

Tehran has presented the violence and killings as the fault of “rioters” while the State Department early in the week referenced reports of security forces indiscriminately opening fire on peaceful protesters.

“We support the rights of Iranians to peacefully assemble and express themselves... without fear of violence, without fear of arbitrary detention by security forces,” U.S. State Dept. spokesman Ned Price said.

Chants saying “down with the Ayatollah” have also been reported based on widely circulating social media videos, also with external Iranian opposition groups as well as Saudi-funded think tanks in the West attempting to seize on the protests as an opportunity to weaken and overthrow the Islamic Republic regime.

Behind the crisis are US-led sanctions, severe government mismanagement of resources, but crucially what’s being dubbed the worst drought in 50 years.

One opposition group called Human Rights Activists in Iran was cited in AP as saying:

“As nearly 5 million Iranians in Khuzestan are lacking access to clean drinking water, Iran is failing to respect, protect, and fulfill the right to water, which is inextricably linked to the right to the highest attainable standard of health”.

Another side of Gaddafi's Libya

IT was a prosperous country, but the nation's wealth did not filter down to the Libyans - only Gaddafi's inner circle and cronies.

Democratic? No, if you went against him you risked your livelihood and possibly your life.

It's well documented about the country's hit squads and also those sent abroad to hunt down the dictator's opposition. Where was free speech and debate?

Pre-Gaddafi, Libya was a clean and ordered country; under him it became broken with broken people.

In 2009, Gaddafi, an advocate of the United States of Africa, was appointed to lead the African Union for a year despite some member states' unease about his nomination. When his year's term ended he wanted to continue for another year, proclaiming he wanted to clean up the states' corruption.

However, his own country was full of corruption, nepotism and regime-sanctioned murders in Libya and across the world.

Many inaccurate statements circulated at the start of his demise and have continued to this day.

Fifteen misconceptions of Libya and Gaddafi have been written by Nizar Mhani of the Free Generation Movement and authenticated by a Libyan citizen.

1. There are no electricity bills; it is free for all.

Despite poor electricity infrastructure and poor coverage of electricity lines, even in the capital Tripoli, home owners pay monthly/quarterly electricity bills based on meter readings. Electricity is cut off over unpaid bills and reconnection upon payment is not instant. Some areas of Libya do not have electricity available at all.

2. There is no interest on loans, banks are state-owned and loans given to all its citizens at 0% interest by law.

Banks have been giving out loans for many years. There is a percentage rate charge on all loans, but in the spirit of 'Islamic ethics' it is not called 'interest', it is called an 'administrative expense'.

3. A house is considered a human right in Libya - Gaddafi vowed that his parents would not get a house until everyone in Libya had a home.

Gaddafi's father has died while his wife and his mother are still living in a tent.

Gaddafi abused this human right. Political opponents and successful

'Libya under Colonel Gaddafi appeared to be run by noble committees of ordinary citizens but the reality was a dictatorship. He had ultimate control over everything.'

by SUSAN ANNE HUSSEIN

businessmen/women had their homes confiscated and handed over to regime members. Many farms, homes and businesses were confiscated during three infamous phases.

In 1969, the dreaded Green Revolution saw free officers rewarded land, homes, and farms that sometimes belonged to others who were not compensated.

In the late 70s, 'The Home Belongs to its Dwellers' law was passed overnight and thousands of homeowners instantly lost their homes as tenants claimed ownership. The law also applied to farms and shops.

In the 90s, the 'Purification Committees' were run by the slogan 'From where did you obtain this?', a form of ultra-socialism where people's possessions, including homes and businesses, were confiscated if seen to be 'surplus to requirement' or contributing to a 'monopoly'.

Meanwhile, Gaddafi lived in a sprawling 6km square compound in the centre of the capital with state-of-the-art security and an underground network of rooms and modern bunkers. He also had a vast farm on Airport Road in Tripoli.

4. All newlyweds receive $60,000 dinar (US$ 50,000) by the government to buy their first apartment to help start a family.

A well-known rumour and joke. While it may have been passed as official legislation, I know of not a single family given this grant which crippling bureaucracy makes them impossible to obtain.

Muammar al Gaddafi

5. Education and medical treatments are free.

Before Gaddafi only 25% of Libyans were literate, today the figure is 83%.

Free does not mean adequate. Libya's standard of healthcare is appalling; the majority of Libyans seeking medical care leave for neighbouring countries.

It is often said Libyans would be happy to forfeit their 'free health care' and pay for a national health service if it was up to standard.

The education system is outdated, teachers are underpaid and under-trained and libraries are almost non-existent. The syllabus was constantly being revised and reviewed under instruction from the former regime, such as banning English, changing Quranic verses, etc.

6. Libyans wanting to take up a farming career received land, a farmhouse, equipments, seeds and livestock for free.

This has never happened. Meanwhile many farms and homes have been confiscated by the government to build railroads, The Great Man Made River and civil roads.

The owners of the land were only compensated if it had a covered structure. Compensation was nowhere near the value of the property and many waited years to receive anything. A corrupt system saw many residents paying a bribe to receive the little they were given.

7. If Libyans cannot find the education or medical facilities they need in Libya, the government funds them to go abroad and also gives $2,300 a month accommodation and car allowance.

If this was the case, the former regime would have been in receipt of six million application forms – one for every man, women and child who 'cannot find education or medical facilities they need'. This grant does not exist for the public.

8. If a Libyan buys a car, the government pays 50% of the price. The price of petrol in Libya is $0.14 per litre.

There is no truth with regards to a new car.

While fuel is cheap, the quality of roads, the accuracy and availability of road signs, the presence of road traffic police, and all other transport infrastructure is of abysmal standard.

The absence of an integrated, functional public transport system means people are reliant on their cars for all movement and might end up paying more on fuel than our Mediterranean neighbours.

9. Libya has no external debt and its reserves amount to $150 billion now frozen internationally.

While sovereign wealth is undeniable, none of it was spent on the people or infrastructure. Basic amenities, services, and state infrastructure are either absent or of appalling standard.

The Arabs have a saying about Libya – 'A rich nation of poor inhabitants'.

10. If a Libyan is unable to get employment after graduation the state will pay the average salary of the profession until employment is found.

False. Even basic wages are sometimes unpaid for months, for those lucky enough to be employed. Welfare for the unemployed is non-existent.

11. A portion of Libyan oil sales is credited directly to the bank accounts of all Libyan citizens.

False.

12. A mother who gives birth to a child receives US $5,000.

False. There is a child benefit welfare payment of 15-20 Libyan dinars a month per child.

13. Forty loaves of bread in Libya costs $ 0.15.

Bread is subsidised by the state and usually costs ¼ dinars for 10 small baguettes or roughly 500 grams per dinar.

14. One in four Libyans has a university degree.

The absence of a comprehensive selection process and a corrupt entry protocol means that universities are grossly overpopulated and oversubscribed, despite limited facilities. This results in too many graduates, but not necessarily an adequate level of employability. There are thousands of students studying foundation-year medicine in Tripoli alone.

15. Gaddafi carried out the world's largest irrigation project, known as the Great Man-Made River project, to make water readily available.

The jury is still out on this. The project has indeed supplied water to many towns and cities around Libya, but the cost is thought to be as stratospheric as the time it took to complete. Further, decades of an absence of appropriate licensing, monitoring and control has meant that wells were dug for every home, putting immense pressure on Libya's naturally-replenishable water sources. This resulted in the increase of salinity in local water reserves, which led to the need for an expansive project such as the man made river.

I have written this as a person with close ties to the country for more than 42 years. I have witnessed some of the points above, some with shock and horror. In a dictatorship, the people are never free.

Half of Australia locked down as citizens told: ‘Don’t talk to each other’

WHAT started as a two-week lockdown in Sydney at the start of July, has expanded to cover more than half of Australia’s 25 million people as of Tuesday 20th as a third state adopted the strict anti-covid measures as the ‘delta’-induced paranoia continued to swell.

South Australia has ordered a ‘snap lockdown’ of (at least) seven days, joining neighboring Victoria and New South Wales, Reuters reported.

Even though Australia’s daily new covid cases and deaths are well below other developed nations, authorities started again with the lockdowns after its ‘drawbridge’ strategy failed to keep covid cases at the country’s insane target level of ‘0’. Now, they’re desperately trying to vaccinate as many Australians as possible during the coming weeks.

Premier Steven Marshall defended his decision to impose the lockdown measures, saying “we hate to put these restrictions in place, but we have just one chance to get this right”. The alternative, he suggested, would be a lengthier freeze. But as the lockdowns spread, the Australian people have grown increasingly irritated, and the politicians are taking notice as their polling numbers plummet.

Protests in Sydney on the 24th of July turned violent with police attacking marchers.

Under the rules of the new lockdown, all South Australian residents are required to remain at home unless they are essential workers or need to purchase groceries or other necessities, or attend medical appointments. Individuals are allowed outside to exercise for a maximum of 90 minutes and within a 2.5km (1.5 mile) radius of their home. Schools will be closed and students will transition to online learning.

The decision to impose a strict snap lockdown comes after just five covid cases were reported, with the fifth being an isolated incident from the other four cases.

“We are seeing more hospitalisations, more admissions to ICU, more people on ventilators - we have to stop the spread of covid,” Kerry Chant, the state’s chief health officer, said in Sydney, referring to intensive care units.

Ninety-five people with covid-19 have been hospitalised in Sydney, 27 of them in intensive care and 11 on ventilators. The state’s five deaths in the latest outbreak take the national toll to 915, with a tally of just over 32,000 infections.

Despite these very low figure, as of Tuesday, some 13 million Australians, over half of the country’s population, are under a stay-at-home mandate. Neighboring Victoria extended its lockdown until July 27. It was intended to last only five days when it was first implemented, yet new cases continue to be found, and the draconian measures of command control continue to be imposed.

Australia’s covid numbers are tiny, so why the massive over-reaction from the government? Since early 2020, the country has recorded just over 32,000 cases and less than 1,000 lives lost to covid, officially. Given the way numbers have been inflated by governments and health departments across the world, the actual number is likely to be a lot lower too.

Furthermore, in what is clearly another push to dehumanise Australians, the chief health officer of New South Wales gave a press conference telling them that they shouldn’t “engage in conversation with each other,” even if they’re wearing masks, in order to reduce the transmission of covid.

“Whilst it’s human nature to engage in conversation with others, to be friendly, unfortunately this is not the time to do that,” said Chant.

“So even if you run into your next door neighbor in the shopping center... don’t start up a conversation, now is the time for minimising your interactions with others, even if you’ve got a mask, do not think that affords total protection, we want to be absolutely sure that as we go about our daily lives we do not come into contact with anyone else that would pose a risk,” she added.

Twilight zone doesn’t even come close.

Cypriots denied groceries

THE low rate of vaccination among young people aged 18 to 30 has prompted the Cypriot government to adopt new measures aimed at promoting and accelerating vaccination rollout, especially among young adults.

At the forefront of the new measures is the ‘SafePass’ policy in place since July 9, whereby citizens aged 12 or older are obliged to possess and present either a vaccination certificate with at least one dose — including completion of a three-week post-vaccination period — or proof that a person has contracted covid-19 in the last 6 months, or a negative PCR or rapid test with a 72-hour validity period.

The SafePass must be presented by employees and customers entering an establishment, be it their workplace, a restaurant or bar. In addition, the provision of free rapid antigen tests will be abolished as of August 1 in an effort to exert pressure on unvaccinated citizens either to get vaccinated or pay for a PCR or rapid test every 72 hours.

Stefanos Athanasiou, owner of ‘Feggaraki’, a souvlaki restaurant, and ‘Madame’, a cocktail bar at the heart of Limassol, explained the difficulties he experienced while implementing this new measure. “We find ourselves in the difficult position of carrying out checks, without any guidelines from the government. We are essentially doing the government’s job”.

He added that “checking our customers’ personal data goes against the ‘mission’ of food service establishments, which is hospitality and entertainment. We had to turn people away because they didn’t have a SafePass.”

Lisbon Court rules only 152 ‘verified cases’ died of covid

THE Lisbon court has ruled that only 0.9% of ‘verified cases’ died of covid-19, totalling 152, instead of the 17,000 claimed by the faked government covid death statistics.

Following a petition started by a citizen, a court in Lisbon was forced to provide verified data on covid-19 mortalities.

The documents revealed that the number of verified covid-19 deaths from January 2020 to April 2021 is only 152, a drastically lesser number than the 17,000 deaths claimed by the government.

The data is from the Sistema de Informação dos Certificados de Óbito (Death Certificate Information System – SICO) in Portugal.

All the other deaths appear to be as a result of unrelated reasons, with many of those listed having tested positive on PCR tests, again, suggesting that the tests are completely unreliable.

Kary Mullis, the inventor of the PCR test, previously stated the results can be interpreted to create the illusion of a pandemic.

Many covid tests have high cycle thresholds – most are set to 37 or 40 – meaning that there are a large number of false positives.

This news comes as a number of large lawsuits are set to take place against those responsible for the covid deception and pushing the vaccine agenda which has caused serious adverse reactions and even death, including one launched in the U.S. state of Alabama on behalf of America’s Frontline Doctors.

Study links acute chest pain in U.S. soldiers to mRNA vaccines

MALE soldiers in the U.S. have been struck by sudden acute chest pains following covid-19 shots.

Previously, we told of rare cases of heart inflammation linked to the mRNA Covid jabs, including the jabs from Pfizer-BioNTech and Moderna.

After a hurried secret meeting with its advisory board on vaccine safety, the FDA issued a warning asking patients experiencing these symptoms to seek help immediately.

The latest study, published in JAMA’s Cardiology Journal, showed that 23 male soldiers (including 22 deemed ‘previously healthy’) between the ages of 20 and 51 presented ‘acute onset of marked chest pain’ within four days of receiving their second dose.

by TYLER DURDEN

Patients who sought care for chest pain in the military health-care system following covid-19 vaccination and were subsequently diagnosed with clinical myocarditis were included in the case study.

All those who tested for myocarditis, a condition that causes the swelling of the heart muscle and can cause difficulty breathing, heart failure and death, were ‘physically fit by military standards and lacking any known history of cardiac disease, significant cardiac risk factors, or exposure to cardiotoxic agents’.

All patients in the study underwent electrocardiography and echocardiography tests. Abnormal electrocardiography findings were recorded in 19 (83%): findings included ST-segment elevations, T-wave inversions, and non-specific ST changes. Echocardiography in four patients (17%) demonstrated reduced left ventricular ejection fractions (40% to 50%).

The cardiac symptoms faded within a week of onset for 16 patients, while seven others continued to have chest discomfort.

As one table from the study showed, the number of cases of heart inflammation reported in the military is much higher than the rate that one might expect given population-wide incidence of these symptoms. This suggests some new variable is likely causing the surge in cases.

The study’s authors concluded that while the overall risk for patients who received an mRNA vaccine remains small, the U.S. is not alone in discovering these cases.

Israel, which also relied mostly on mRNA vaccines to inoculate its population, is also seeing surprisingly high incidence of heart inflammation likely linked to the vaccines.

Childrens' FutureZ

- New group warns young it is safer to wait
- Jab risks outweigh benefits says UK-wide movement

A NEW movement is aiming to inform young people of the risks of covid injections.

FutureZ, run by 800 UK-wide volunteers, also seeks to give support to those concerned about the long-term health impacts school covid measures are having on the young.

A spokesman told The Light: "We have a vast network of concerned and active young people, parents, grandparents and teachers giving time and skills to raise awareness and create practical alternative solutions.

Our initial awareness campaign has been aimed at providing access to well-balanced, accurate information on covid-19 and the jabs for 12-16 year olds."

The campaign seeks to empower young people to take the time to look carefully at the data before making

by SAMMY MARCH

Our campaign is aligned with many others on this issue and uses the motto or hashtag #safertowait.

"We are also working closely with a small independent Union to bring Secondary School' head teachers' attention to their potential breach of Health & Safety, and other legislation if they continue to impose coronavirus measures within school settings. The current campaign is highlighting many 'holes' in school measures which could put head teachers, governors and anybody enforcing these measures at risk of civil or criminal prosecution in a personal capacity.

This includes any involvement in the government's planned vaccine rollout for 12-16 year olds".

Alongside this, there's the now famous Newsround segment which will have been watched across the majority of Primary and Secondary Schools in the UK where children were told by a 'leading' medical professional the jab is 100% safe! Everybody knows that no medical intervention is 100% safe; and certainly when it comes to this jab, information coming out of the U.S. and Israel show alarmingly high rates of myocarditis in young people, other serious adverse reactions, Indeed some children are dying, including 13-year-old Michigan boy, Jacob Clynick, who died a few days after receiving his second dose of the Pfizer covid-19 vaccine..

When we see the damage that is being caused in other countries any decision with their parents. It plugs the void of information presented by the UK government and mainstream media; information like reported adverse reactions, the fact these jabs are still in trial, the very low covid-19 mortality rates for young people and gives access to other peer reviewed medical research.

"As children have very little risk of dying of covid-19 and all vulnerable adults have now been offered vaccination, the potential harms and risks to children far outweigh any possible benefits.

Whistleblowers in the education system have revealed a raft of biased propaganda-style resources coming out of health authorities, government and traditional school unions.

The FutureZ spokesman added: "These include a Stephen Hawking Institute Slide Deck created for use in class discussions. The presentation gives biased information and uses 'hands up if you're planning to get the jab' tactics to identify those unlikely to accept the injections and then use persuasive tactics, like peer pressure, to sway decisions.

and then hear our own government continuing to push hard to continue the jab roll-out for 12-16 year olds, this creates a lot of upset and concern for parents.

It creates issues of trust with many parents now questioning how they will give their children a safe and positive education experience, and how they can make sure their children are not manipulated at school into making a decision that could have devastating effects on their health".

Exciting co-operative solutions growing in more communities

FARMACY co-op is a not-for-profit social enterprise that was launched in Bakewell - Peak District National Park - just before covid was a thing. They are focused on easy and secure access to nutritious organic food and essential items.

"We've all been through a lot over the last 15 months - and those challenges will continue - but the year ahead is also going to be very exciting. The People are ready to create the alternative systems & services we're all going to need", Danny Moore, a Founder Member, told The Light.

They currently deliver 4 types of organic fruit & veg boxes all over the Peaks, Derbyshire, Notts, Cheshire, Staffs, Greater Manchester, Sheffield & Chesterfield. There is good news for readers of The Light - they are expanding nationwide!

"We currently have two main areas of growth:

1. Building a national distribution network that is secure and owned by the People - so our family & friends always have access to organic food and essential items.
2. Working with local communities to introduce essential services," said Danny "The national distribution network is connected to organic farms nationwide and will be interconnected with local food & economic systems all over the country."

Farmacy Co-op is looking for Drivers countrywide:

Local Drivers - that distribute boxes within their community, meeting some great people and having fabulous conversations - focused on building a community of like-minded people.

Regional Drivers - people that have larger cars or vans that can move boxes from a Distribution Hub to the homes of their Local Drivers.

by ADELE SHAW

Danny told us: "We will pay for petrol and give drivers a large box of organic fruit & veg as a thank you. Depending on how many boxes they deliver, we can also compensate further towards their time."

"We are expanding quickly and are looking for a number of people to support our mission. We need coordinators in the following areas; Website, Recruitment, Operations, Logistics, Finance, Marketing, Sales & Fundraising," explained Danny.

You can order a one-off box, buy boxes in bulk to get additional savings or use their flexible subscription service with some great benefits. They are currently running a Crowdfunding campaign, with further details on their website.

"The organic fruit & veg boxes have been so popular that we're launching additional boxes soon:

Organic Staples box including bread, dried pulses, nuts and fruit etc.

Natural Essentials box with locally made toiletries, cleaning products and more," added Danny.

The exciting news for everyone reading this, is that as soon as there is enough demand in your area, they will launch the services you need, including collection points / community hubs, pop-up co-ops (organic farmers market / local economic hub), organic food production, local packing operations, health programs, seed banks, food banks, food storage, community farms, people-powered distribution network, permanent venue for a co-operative & community hub and other core systems & services.

There is a dangerous tendency to think it's nearly all over.

There's a dangerous tendency to believe that monthly vaccinations will keep everyone safe and that we'll all live for ever if we do what we're told.

There's a dangerous tendency to assume that those in authority care about us and are doing what they can to protect us.

There's a dangerous tendency to believe that everything that is happening is a result of an illness called covid-19.

Those are CRUCIAL ERRORS

THE disease known as covid-19 was never anything more than a means to an end; a training programme.

The lockdowns, the masks, the social distancing will soon be back. The plan is for mandatory vaccinations for all – something I warned about eighteen months ago – to be part of our lives forever. And the mandatory vaccinations won't just be for covid-19.

For a year they promised that the experimental covid-19 jabs would not be mandatory and that there would be no discrimination between the jabbed and the unjabbed.

But, they were lying, of course.

You'd have to be mentally deficient in some way – perhaps through wearing a mask for too long and suffering the inevitable dementia – to believe that we are in the middle of a pandemic.

And we can see now why Bill Gates told governments to give indemnity to the drug companies. Without indemnity the courts would be clogged with lawsuits brought by injured vaccine victims, and the doctors who've been jabbing away for money would be behind bars.

Incidentally, I expect you'll be pleased to know that Microsoft's Irish arm made a profit of £222 billion last year and did not pay one penny in tax. The Guardian and the BBC both describe Gates, their financial partner, as a 'philanthropist'.

Meanwhile, the vaccinated can now go to an airport, wait six hours to be processed and then travel to El Salvador, Gabon or Kosovo. Sadly, they may not be able to come back without a lengthy stay in an airport hotel at both ends but let's not be gloomy. This is obviously a great breakthrough for those dreaming of an exciting two week stay on top of the Accursed Mountains in the centre of the Balkans.

The truth is that this war has hardly started and we have to concentrate hard, abandon all our differences and dedicate ourselves to fighting for our freedom, our humanity, our identity and our very lives.

It really doesn't matter a damn whether or not covid-19 was created in a laboratory, is really an exosome, is this year's version of the common or garden flu or fell off the back of a lorry.

Covid-19 is merely a distraction, an artificial threat devised to create terror and obedience and to force citizens around the world to abandon their senses - including common sense, the rarest and possibly the most valuable sense of all.

We are at the beginning of a long and stony road.

This fraud has been planned for decades and they've thought of just about everything. It's no coincidence

by Dr VERNON COLEMAN
MB ChB DSc

that the UK government is advised by a member of the Communist Party and by experts in mind control.

They have refused to debate any of the scientific issues. They've demonised and libelled the truth tellers and refused to allow vaccine critics any access to the mainstream media. Drug company hackers and the British and American governments tried to take down vernoncoleman.org over 2,000 times last month.

'We have to concentrate hard, abandon all our differences and dedicate ourselves to fighting for our freedom'

Back in March 2020, covid-19 was officially classified as being no more dangerous than the flu. That's what the UK government was told.

Since then they have lied about the number of deaths (fraudulently counting anyone who tested positive in the weeks before their death as a 'covid death'), they have fiddled the numbers allegedly testing positive for covid-19 by using a PCR test that independent scientists agree is as reliable as a coin toss.

Everything the politicians, the advisors and the mainstream media tell us is a lie. And now we know what all those Bilderberger meetings were about. They really were plotting the end of the world. Parliament is dominated by cowards who'd vote for anyone who offered them a free bag of sweets and a bottle of pop.

They introduced lockdowns (proven to do no good but a lot of harm), forced people to wear masks (proven to do more harm than good) and closed schools, hospital departments and businesses (all guaranteed to do harm and no good).

The plan was always to kill millions by shutting down hospital units, by denying millions (especially the elderly, the disabled and the sick) any real access to basic medical care, by creating food shortages and by the mass use of a dangerous, experimental jab. Meanwhile, as the number of people dying on waiting lists soars into the many millions, doctors and the NHS glow in the receipt of the George Cross, so doctors and nurses make it clear where their loyalty lies. Consultants are threatening industrial action because they want even more money. And the Royal College of Nursing is considering a strike ballot as nurses demand a pay rise of 12.5%. Anyone needing life-saving surgery will be lucky to be seen before the next millennium is under way.

The ultimate plan is to remove the last vestiges of freedom and democracy, to take away all our human rights, to banish financial independence for those not already billionaires and to turn transhumanism from a science fiction theory to a practical fact.

The conspirators label those of us who know what is going on as 'conspiracy theorists', as though we are dangerous citizens who have lost touch with reality but the truth is that our lives are being managed by conspirators and what is happening is no longer a theory.

Just look at some of the things that have been happening recently and that are due to happen soon:

- They are planning food shortages. Farming and transport have been hard hit by false PCR tests – with the result that food supplies are not getting through. Around the world, millions are already dying. Also, an experiment (in the guise of combatting fake global warming) part funded by Bill Gates, intends to send calcium carbonate into the stratosphere to dim the sun, which will then further help to destroy traditional farming.
- More untested experimental jabs will be made mandatory. There's a plan to vaccinate sick children – the ones most likely to be killed by the jab.
- Poverty is on the rise. As inflation soars (in the USA it is now already believed to be between 5% and 10% and soaring) so the rich will get richer and everyone else will get poorer.
- Cultural changes will result in the deliberate creation of racism and hatred. History is being altered and suppressed to suit the aims of the rulers and their 'Great Reset'.

There will be a return of the flu, of course. That's been predictable for months. Pathogenic priming deaths from the jabs will be blamed on the flu.

In expectation of its 'surprise' return, the enemy is now planning to introduce an mRNA flu vaccine which will doubtless further damage the millions who have already been severely injured by the mRNA covid-19 jabs.

Remember too that in February 2020 the BMJ published a letter pointing out that flu shots could have contributed to the covid-19 outbreak. The author reported that a randomised placebo controlled trial in children showed that flu shots increased five-fold the risk of acute respiratory infections caused by a group of viruses including coronaviruses. The argument was that flu vaccines might alter our immune systems to increase susceptibility to other infections.

The next month or two is going to see a tightening of the rules, the threats and the restrictions.

'We trusted you to behave,' they will say, 'but you behaved badly and let us down. You can no longer be trusted with any control over your own lives.'

The unvaccinated are going to be blamed for the new lockdowns. The young are going to be bullied, blackmailed and bribed into accepting a deadly, experimental jab which they don't need and which doesn't do what they are told it will do. Those promoting it should be arrested and charged with manslaughter.

They want you terrified, oppressed and ultimately dead. It's a coup; a blatant plan for total world control. It may all sound like something out of an early James Bond movie but it's all very, very real.

And yet the flu and cold weather used to kill more people than covid-19.

It is no exaggeration to claim that this is the most important war in history.

The biggest danger to us is complacency and a feeling that the war is nearly over.

The war isn't nearly over.

It has hardly started.

And I'm afraid it's going to get much worse.

But stay strong.

We will win this war if we fight with determination, passion and the truth.

Reckless energy policy could lead to more blackouts - industry expert

by DEREK G BIRKETT

A RECKLESS fixation with greening the UK's power supply has left the country facing energy shortages and ever-increasing consumer costs.

Last November, an article in the Times indicated how National Grid could expect electricity supply to increase from 110GW at present to between 145GW and 180GW by 2030.

State policy is for that extra 70GW to come largely from offshore wind. Replicating previous nationalised investment is not an option. As a consequence of going into Europe, project teams were disbanded, skilled personnel retired and a manufacturing base greatly reduced.

By necessity, nuclear investment is clearly the future direction for the UK if the residual legacy of our national manufacture can be harnessed towards a power station programme with the aim of self-reliance.

This direction has already been indicated with the Hinkley Point contract from EdeF having dated technology. However many uncertainties remain, not least the time scale involved with such a huge project.

What should be of concern is the existing nuclear Advanced Gas-cooled Reactor portfolio of seven power stations. The one at Hunterston is soon expected to retire, having been operating at reduced load for the last decade. When sold from British Energy to EdeF in 2008, the prospectus gave closure dates ranging from 2014 to 2023. These dates matter as two-thirds of the 29GW of coal capacity has been withdrawn, leaving the refurbished nuclear portfolio to provide the bulk of that energy shortfall to support the grid system. Wind, solar and interconnection are all connected through power electronics and give no guaranteed stored back-up.

Circumstances could have been different had certain private initiatives been supported by the state, with coal projects at Hunterston and Kingsnorth and a successor nuclear station to Sizewell approved as intended. Instead the state has been led into a blind alley, with the promise of renewable salvation, following a prolonged and increasingly frenzied media campaign.

New nuclear technology in Small Modular Reactors (SMR) has promise whereby suggested modules of 470MW can be factory made and installed at site in a fraction of the time taken by its dated cousin. The UK has some expertise in this field, although progress is reliant on orders to decide locations, with the intent to power ten reactors by 2030. Critically, unlike its dated cousin, it could 'load follow', ie be dispatchable overnight.

Wind power is our albatross. A major consequence of renewable investment has been the scale of supporting transmission, together with a significant proposed interconnection to Europe at 10GW. Power generated must go somewhere, it cannot be spilled. If demand on the GB grid system is insufficient then exporting by undersea cables (unreliable and with the high risk of extended outage) is the only option apart from expensive and limited pumped storage.

At times of excessive wind output, heavy expense arises with constraint payments for any instructed shutdown. This is especially so overnight in summer when system demands have been down to as low as 18GW that would then face the hazard of rising solar output. Adding to this problem is the escalating cost of electricity where the attempt to force the use of heat pumps in place of gas will meet serious opposition.

Petrol and diesel car manufacture has been proscribed from 2030 to stimulate further demand, and removing competition will embed dependency on the brittle nature of electricity supply.

Demands are already much lower than a decade ago because of rising bills, so overheads inevitably must be met from a smaller base. With state policies to spend, escalating costs can only continue.

Electricity bills have trebled since the millenium, doubling over the past decade. A radical solution being proposed by the Global Warming Policy Foundation is the removal of all subsidies from consumer bills with their costs being transferred into general taxation. These set of conditions are a reckless scenario. It can be understood as to why such an enormous investment has been made into smart metering whose essential purpose is to control demand by disconnection.

The effect of losing frequency control is to invite grid system instability. The risks of failure are enormous, given the time scales involved with supply, from excessive wind investment, interconnection failure and grid instability from insufficient guaranteed energy sources. We would become beholden to the EU with the sword of Damocles above our heads. All leverage for export and imports would be lost, especially from an increasingly authoritarian neighbour.

Having flouted the vital principle of a generation mix, what should be our Plan B? Currently, heavy reliance is being placed on the capacity market in order to maintain adequate plant margins over the winter period. This solution will become less reliable and only serves to delay the need for new dispatchable capacity.

Another uncertainty is the expected fundamental change to National Grid. This syndicate is where all expertise with system security is concentrated and any error of judgement would have considerable repercussions. The structure that eventually emerges should have as a critical qualification its independence from government.

The precarious position we find ourselves in has been in part due to relinquishing our sovereignty to the EU, but the real damage has come from the enduring scale of subsidies for very costly 'green' energy sources over a decade being inflicted onto the consumer thereby avoiding scrutiny by parliament.

Many problems could have been foreseen with more transparency and commercial discipline. The GWPF recently calculated that energy subsidies cost each household £350 last year and will rise by £25 annually. In addition, the cost of managing the grid system comes to £65 per year for each household, and will rise £20 per year, not to mention the cost of grid upgrades.

Lord Lawson, GWPF director, warned: "We are in the middle of an economic crisis and consumers are hit with astronomical costs for unreliable wind energy. These multi-billion pound subsidies are not only a massive transfer of wealth from the poor to the rich but are damaging the UK economy as a whole. This madness has to stop".

Finally, the UK saw an anti-cyclone lasting almost three weeks in April with a wind contribution of around 1 to 3GW from a 25GW portfolio. Over that period there appears to have been at least two outages from the three continental interconnections.

Had it been mid-winter, we would probably have had disruption to supplies. Last winter there were four warnings from National Grid of insufficient supply capacity, a situation not experienced over the previous four years.

Fulvic minerals - Supermud!

THE free supplement has to be the soil itself. The soil is a reflection of all life, we all end up in the soil, in fact everything that has ever lived and died is there. You may have seen films of animals crossing vast distances to lick mineral rich rocks or goats climbing dams to do the same.

Rather than going to an unspoilt forest with a bucket and spade, the earth has handily provided highly concentrated deposits of the stuff in rare corners of the world. So concentrated in fact that a small bottle can last months and the effects can be profound. I have seen people who believed that they were about to die, say that they knew they were going to be alright as they first tasted it. There is a video testimonial of this on our sites.

This type of mud is known as Fulvic Minerals or Fulvic and humic, or fulvic and humic acids or just fulvic acid.

I pretty much pioneered Fulvic Minerals in the UK some 13 years ago and the results have been exceptional. I had been studying cancer recovery at that time and found that the Chinese had been using it extensively and I was able to find an exceptional source. Quality is paramount with Fulvic Minerals and it is important to find the best which will, by definition, be highly concentrated.

Fulvic is the result of many

years of mineral deposits by healthy soil, in this case at a time scientists determine that there were 4 times the amount of species and they were much larger and purer then. Healthy soil is unfortunately becoming a thing of the past along with these delicate compounds. These trace minerals used to be abundant in the food we ate, however the advent of modern farming methods have caused the loss of Fulvic in the soil which has caused its nutrient loss from our food.

One of the wonderful things about Fulvic is its perfect balance and unlike many other products this Fulvic is so concentrated by nature that it can be extracted with water and nothing else, no chemicals are needed. Fulvic plays a major role in the modern world by detoxifying the body from glyphosate, a herbicide now found in almost every human, including babies. It is ideal for pregnant or breast-feeding mums, as is iodine, magnesium, vitamin C and good healthy natural food that our ancestors would have recognised.

Fulvic may be the most important nutrient missing from our diet – it is nature’s intended vehicle for nutrient transportation into living cells. It cannot be synthesised in a laboratory due to its highly complex nature. It is one of the few supplements that I love to use daily to supercharge the water that I drink.

Fulvic Minerals are rich in naturally occurring rare earths, trace minerals, amino acids, phytonutrients, supercharged antioxidants, superoxide dismutase (SOD), enzymes, hormones, natural antibiotics and natural fungicides. Trace amounts of everything natural, literally.

Fulvic has a low molecular weight, making it able to penetrate cell walls and mitochondria, having bonded with vitamins and minerals, it efficiently delivers these nutrients to exactly where they are needed. Without this precious compound, the ability of the body to absorb nutrients is severely diminished.

Fulvic is a super-antioxidant and detoxifier, it can react with both negatively and positively unpaired free electrons to render free radicals harmless, changing them into new useable compounds or eliminating them as waste. It is also effective in binding with organic pollutants (pesticides and herbicides), to form new types of metal ions and catalyse the breakdown of toxic pollutants.

Fulvic promotes optimum PH levels in the body. It can help the biological terrain of the human body change from an acidic, anaerobic environment, low in oxygen content, to a beneficial alkaline terrain high in oxygen content. This helps the body to reduce harmful bacterial and microbial growth, creating a healthy environment in which disease cannot thrive.

Fulvic increases cellular voltage and has highly active carbon, hydrogen, molecular oxygen (available oxygen) and enables better electrolyte balance. It recharges cells, allowing them to carry an electrical charge longer than normal, enabling them to survive longer as a cell.

The body must get enough electrons to keep cells at a healthy, healing voltage. While proper nutrition is extremely important, it is not enough without voltage. With its unique ability to bring molecular oxygen into the body, Fulvic increases the oxygen concentration.

According to the biochemist Careylyn Carter, “Fulvic molecules act like mini batteries, going around and charging everything that they come in contact with. It raises the voltage. When our cell’s membranes are fully charged, nutrients can get inside the cell more easily. When nutrients are inside cells, they are available for biochemical processes that support our wellness.”

Ingesting Fulvic promotes gut health and helps to create an optimal environment where beneficial probiotic bacteria can flourish. The minerals and trace elements contained within this miracle substance provide a wealth of nutrients for the probiotic bacteria to feed on, and the perfect pH environment in which they can thrive. Some of the trace elements and rare earths like yttrium contained in the Fulvic complex are not used by the human body itself but are vital for our gut bacteria.

Furthermore, the ability of Fulvic to aid the assimilation of nutrients helps to equip the cells with the things they require to create digestive enzymes. It has also been shown to speed up the metabolism of protein and carbohydrates which are not digested as easily as fats.

Hypothyroidism - treatments are being denied by medical profession

I HAVE hypothyroidism. Most hypothyroid people are only given one official type of medication, which is Levothyroxine.

Informed consent is being told of the pros and cons of the medication and any alternative medication. This is not done with hypothyroidism. There are two other medications available - natural desiccated thyroid and Liothyronine. Hypothyroid people are not told about or given access to these two.

Natural desiccated thyroid is ‘grandfathered’ as it has been around since the end of the 19th century. It gives a hypothyroid person all the thyroid hormones they need. But when Levothyroxine was invented, the pharmaceutical companies maligned the effectiveness and safety of this thyroid medication. Consequently patients were, and still are, denied an alternative.

by DENISE BOWERY

The medical profession thinks that levothyroxine is the only medication needed but some hypothyroid people cannot convert the Levothyroxine (T4) into Liothyronine (T3). The medical profession does not acknowledge that there is a ‘conversion condition’. So people that cannot convert T4 into T3 are being given Levothyroxine with dangerous consequences.

Levothyroxine has been recalled multiple times since it was first introduced in the 1960s.

A few years ago a rare few doctors prescribed Liothyronine and Levothyroxine as an alternative to NDT (natural desiccated thyroid) but they were stopped. Any doctor who goes outside the script faces a medical enquiry.

The other nail in the hypothyroid coffin was that pharmaceutical companies increased their Liothyronine prices by an obscene amount. Now doctors can not only say they can’t prescribe T3 because it is not necessary but they have another reason - cost.

The way hypothyroid people are treated is appalling. The blood tests are extremely inaccurate. Many people are ignored by doctors saying it is all in their head. Each hypothyroid symptom is treated as separate while the long list of hypothyroid symptoms should be together considered in diagnosis. Only one type of medication offered to a chronic condition! Not being told that there are other medications available and being denied proper treatment is dangerous.

It is just the same as denying Ivermectin, Hydroxychloroquine, etc. to covid patients.

Online website such as the tpa U.K.(thyroid patients advocacy) and Facebook pages such as ITT (improve thyroid treatment) write to the government and various NHS and medical authorities but get nowhere. Hypothyroidism is being cancelled, ghosted. Hy is a chronic and debilitating condition which is being downplayed and almost ignored. Censorship it seems, is everywhere.

I have hypothyroidism and a conversion condition.
