“It’s a big club, and you ain’t in it!”
- George Carlin 2005

The truth will set us free

‘THE past was erased, the erasure forgotten, the lie became the truth’ - George Orwell, 1984.

What a dystopian world we are bequeathing our children - lies have become the accepted truth, while the truth is censored, vilified, excoriated and above all, feared and persecuted by the masses.

The Light paper will always endeavour to bring readers a true and broad picture of what is going on today, outside of the captured corporate media machine messages which many can now see are nothing but well-honed propaganda, capable of inducing mass hypnosis and false beliefs in great swathes of the population.

Those who are still hopelessly naive about both the rulers’ control over nearly every aspect of their lives, and the thoughts they have been trained to regurgitate any time the subject of being controlled comes up, would do well to read and research our articles with an open mind, and ask themselves when the rulers and their puppet politicians ever actually made things better for us and our loved ones.

Gaslighting is the psychological technique of brazen, barefaced lying, in order to have the target question their own sanity, by point-blank refusing the evidence and turning it on the target. Governments have been doing it for centuries: you tell the people things are getting better while you rob them blind and mortgage the truly great future they really could have. The rulers see us as cattle, unfit to run our own lives, and so they must run the world for us.

In their religion, because we are inferior, we should not be well-fed or educated, thus their insane beliefs are reinforced by their continuing debilitating acts. There is neither humour nor humanity in the future they have planned for the world.

If people could see that they are being ruled, caged and robbed, while being lied to about it, they would stop it in an instant, and this is what the rulers are most afraid of. This is why there is mass censorship and tight control over online discourse, along with the psychological manipulation they have been perfecting for well over a century.

Even on the surface, those in charge are doing a terrible job: War, disease, terrorism, extremism, racism, accelerating inflation, a decelerating economy, injustices, political attacks, mass surveillance online and on our roads, removal of free speech, and expanded powers for the state, particularly the security services and the police. Did anyone ever vote for any of this? Well, yes...

Once seen, the next question is: what can we do about it? The answer remains, for the time being, quite a lot - but we are racing an ever-shrinking gap of light before the cell door firmly shuts and there is no way out for future generations: once everything goes digital, especially currency, the game is over and freedom will be lost for ever.

But until it is over, there’s still time to turn the tide. First, we can raise the alarm, which is the raison d’être of this newspaper, and people have been using The Light in many different situations to help ‘wake people up’.

The information war should not be underestimated; once enough people know what’s going on and can see through the lies and deceptions being aimed at the public through the mass media/education propaganda machine, whatever action they are told to take will be refused. Tyrants can give out orders, but if no one obeys, their power is illusory.

Second, we can continue to build new ex-corporate, independent structures, businesses and networks which offer a cheaper, more direct or better service or product to people. We should encourage others to provide local, independent, trusted and far better value goods and services which people actually need, by buying from them rather than supermarkets or online giants. Small is beautiful.

And truth is vital. To get to it, a variety of different/opposing views is essential if we are to continue to have any kind of free and prosperous world. Tyrannies never prosper.

MP hits out at government ‘propaganda war’

A MEMBER of parliament has accused the UK Government of using a ‘disinformation campaign’ to encourage covid-19 injection take-up while being in denial about the treatment’s safety.

Sir Christopher Chope also accused the mainstream media of “seeing themselves as the spokespersons for the government propaganda machine” and claimed editorial decisions were being made to keep covid injection harm issues “under wraps”.

The Conservative MP for Christchurch, Dorset, told Holding the Line: Journalists Against Covid Censorship he had been contacted by hundreds of people across the UK about serious harm, including death, caused by the injections.

He said: “There is a propaganda war to say they are safe and nothing to worry about. There has been pressure on staff to take them and for going to venues and going abroad.

“My biggest concern is this was a propaganda war where truth was the victim and people were discouraged from using their own judgement.”

He said the government’s Yellow Card vaccine injury reporting scheme had up to 500,000 covid injection injuries flagged, including reports of 2,000 deaths and a five-figure number of those who suffered very serious consequences.

Sir Christopher said there were cases where people reporting vaccine injuries to the NHS were “ridiculed as having mental health issues”.

by HOLDING THE LINE

He said some NHS staff he had spoken to in his constituency were relieved they no longer had to have a covid injection as terms of their employment, as they had seen with their own eyes some of the adverse consequences.

Sir Christopher, an MP since 1997, said: “Some people are feeling the need to club together to fight back against the disinformation campaign from the government.

“The media have seen themselves as the spokespersons for the government propaganda machine and continue to do so.”

Asked why he was sticking his head above the parapet on the issue while so many of his MP colleagues appeared reluctant to do so, he said: “The reason I’m making a stand is because I know there are a group of people who are the forgotten heroes of the pandemic.

“They are the people who followed the government advice that they should get vaccinated in order to promote good public health and in following that advice they have suffered dire consequences, in some cases fatalities and in other cases life-changing injuries.

“So many in middle and younger age groups with no underlying health issues have had their lives completely wrecked.”

Sir Christopher said YouTube had censored a speech he gave in parliament in early March of this year about covid injection harm that had been uploaded on the platform.

He said YouTube claimed the video contained content which was “medical disinformation” – which he denied.

He said the censorship of injection harm information also reached across to the corporate media where journalists at the main television stations and broadsheet newspapers had told him there was ‘nervousness about opening up’ on these issues.

Sir Christopher said: “There are some brave journalists who buck the trend, but on the editorial level there is very much a ‘let’s keep this under wraps’.

“I have accused the government of being in denial about the fact that the vaccines are not safe for everybody.”

But he added the government now acknowledged that some had died or were seriously injured as a result of the injections – when its initial view had been that the treatment was absolutely safe.

Since raising the safety issues with the government, Sir Christopher said he had been told the Vaccine Damage Payment Scheme had been transferred to a dedicated team at the NHS Business Authority.

Yet no one had so far received any compensation for injection harm through the scheme and claims were only just starting to be processed, with a lot of obstacles appearing to be put in the way of those who were claiming.

Sir Christopher said organisations claiming to be fact-checkers were trying to ridicule and discredit factual information in regard to injection harm, and he was concerned that the Online

Sir Christopher Chope MP

Safety Bill going through parliament could challenge the right to speak out fearlessly with opposing views.

When asked who might be responsible for the lack of debate, he said: “There is always a group of people who are rather statist [advocates of a political system in which the state has substantial centralised control over social and economic affairs] whose life would be much easier if people could not express individual opinions.”

Farmers being paid to stop farming

IT is hard to fathom the UK government’s recent lump-sum-exit-scheme that effectively bribes farmers to retire and turn over their land to woodland, whilst a potential world food crisis looms according to the IMF (International Monetary Fund).

According to the United Kingdom Food Security Report 2021: Theme 2, not even half of the food on our plates is produced in the UK. But instead of encouraging growth, the government is doing the opposite! How will we now make up the deficit? In Spain and Greece, supermarkets are already rationing food.

by CLARA WEISS

Even as Biden and Trudeau announce food shortages, farmers are being paid to stop farming. Chickens are now designated illegal animals, due to bird flu (diagnosed by a fraudulent PCR test), also justifying millions of birds being culled in the UK and France. The EU is culling livestock as they run out of animal feed, and in the UK, cows are being exterminated due to a lack of farmworkers. Meanwhile, the Netherlands is seriously considering a meat tax.

Bill Gates has invested in major vegan meat-substitute companies to produce synthetic burgers, bratwurst and plant-based GMO (genetically modified organisms) ‘chicken’ tacos. Gates has also quietly made himself the largest owner of farmland in the United States. For a man obsessed with monopoly control, the opportunity to also dominate food production to instate GMOs must seem irresistible.

Swathes of fertile land are being planted with solar panels.

This is all part of a wider plan, long in the making, to ‘rewild’ and ‘save the world from climate change’. The rhetoric is attractive:

■ Rewilding Britain - “can help reverse species extinction, tackle climate change and improve our overall health and wellbeing.”

- Wildlands Project - “Mission to reconnect, restore and rewild North America so that life – in all its diversity – can thrive.”
- Rewilding Europe - “Making Europe a Wilder Place.”

Meanwhile, livestock will become extinct, heralding the end of meat production. Vast expanses of farmland and human habitat will disappear. Preserving our existing natural habitat, conservation and greening our deserts is clearly a priority for our survival – and can surely be achieved without the senseless slaughtering of hundreds of millions of livestock or the corralling of human beings into tightly-packed smart cities of high-rise tenements, where sunlight, greenery and quality of life will be in dire deficit.

Climate engineering: We're being sprayed

Look up!
What's that in our skies?

For at least 15 years, covert weather modification activities have been taking place with ever-increasing scale and frequency

LIFE on Earth exists in a complex and fragile state of mutually-dependent dynamic equilibria between and among biota (plant and animal life) and the physical environment. Any disturbance is apt to upset this delicate balance with potentially devastating consequences for numerous species, including mankind.

Geoengineering may be defined as 'the deliberate large-scale manipulation of the environment including weather and climate manipulation'.

The basis for geoengineering stems from cloud seeding experiments in 1946-47. It was discovered that adding dry ice (frozen CO₂) or silver iodide to clouds could aid in the nucleation of rain or snow. Development of the technology to control weather for use as a weapon of war began with that discovery and has proceeded in secret ever since.

From 1967 to 1972, Operation Popeye involved cloud seeding with the intention of extending the monsoon season over the Ho Chi Minh Trail to impede transport of troops and supplies during the Vietnam War. But causing clouds to dump rain or snow more or less at will was just the first step.

The military wanted to fully control the weather as a weapon of war, as was later described in the 1996 U.S. Air Force document: Weather as a Force Multiplier: Owning the Weather in 2025. In retrospect, that document should have been cause for alarm. Since the end of World War II, the U.S. military has been single-minded in its scientific pursuits with no sense of responsibility for the wellbeing of either civilian populations or the environment.

After learning how to make clouds produce rain or snow more or less on demand, the next technological step was to learn how to inhibit rainfall to bring drought and starvation to a perceived enemy nation.

For at least thirty years, experiments were conducted in the lower atmosphere (troposphere) that involved jets spraying undisclosed substances which left particulate trails across the sky that were witnessed by millions. These trails at first superficially resemble contrails, which are ice crystals formed from aircraft exhaust. Contrails are formed, however, only in very humid environments, with temperatures low enough to sustain the saturation vapour pressure with respect to ice, and with sufficient moisture content in the exhaust gases. Contrails rapidly become invisible by evaporation, whereas particulate trails spread out to sometimes briefly form artificial cirrus-like clouds before further spreading to form a white haze in the sky.

For at least fifteen years covert weather/climate modification activities have been taking place with ever-increasing scale and frequency that involve spraying pollutant particles into the troposphere. The scientific community has been grossly remiss in ignoring the now near-daily, near-universal spraying of particulate-pollution matter into the troposphere, which evidence indicates is coal fly ash, a substance containing toxins injurious to virtually all biota, including us.

Not only does the spraying contaminate the environment, but the aerial placement of this particulatepollution causes warming and alters weather patterns, which can cause damage or injury to human health and even loss of life, disrupt food production, and create a pestilent-ridden, unhealthy environment on a worldwide scale.

by J MARVIN HENDON

Yet the consequences of this weather/climate modification

Particulate trails spread out to sometimes briefly form artificial cirrus-like clouds before further spreading to form a white haze in the sky geoengineering activity have not been taken into account by any of the climate change models evaluated by the United Nations Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), a fact that calls into question not only the findings of that organisation, but its moral authority as well.

I hold that scientists, because of their abilities and training, have the responsibility to benefit mankind and advance civilisation. I therefore chose to apply scientific methods to ascertain the nature of the main substance being sprayed into the troposphere and discovered three independent lines of evidence that the tropospheric geoengineering particulate-pollution consists mainly of coal combustion fly ash.

When coal is burned by electric power utilities, the heavy ash settles and the fly ash goes up the smokestacks, where in Western nations it is electrostatically trapped and sequestered, as this ash-portion contains most of the toxic heavy metals that were incorporated in the coal.

When sprayed into the troposphere, coal fly ash inhibits rain or snow fall, absorbs atmospheric moisture, enhances the electrical conductivity of atmospheric moisture, warms the atmosphere, and blocks radiation from the surface into the upper atmosphere.

When the coal fly ash, with its typically dark grey colour settles to Earth, it absorbs sunlight and changes the albedo of snow and ice which aids in its melting. In other words, in addition to causing drought, when sprayed into the troposphere on a near-worldwide, near-daily basis as at present, the aerosolised coal fly ash warms the Earth, causing deliberate anthropogenic global warming of a different type than that allegedly caused by greenhouse gases.

Jet aircraft that spray coal fly ash into the troposphere are part of a covert program and operate from undisclosed airbases. On or about February 14, 2016, an aircraft presumably operating out of Selfridge Air National Guard Base in Michigan (USA) momentarily released a small portion of its payload, which reportedly fell on residential properties in Harrison Township, Michigan (USA).

The material was sampled and analysed by officials from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. The results of those analyses provide evidence of a deliberate operation to melt ice and snow, which is consistent with the hypothesis that aerosolised coal fly ash is being used to enhance 'global warming'.

Interestingly, one component of the airdrop material, inferred here from analytical results, is coal fly ash. Scientists who study glaciers should be mindful of the evidence presented here, and should look for instances where such matter, referred to as synthetic cryoconite, or proto-cryoconite, might have been dropped.

The coal fly ash component of the airdrop material further pollutes the environment with toxic heavy metals. Considerable time, effort and expense was required to develop the air-drop material, that I refer to as synthetic cryoconite, or protocryoconite, and to develop and test the technology to disperse that material from the air in a systematic and effective manner; consequently, it seems unlikely that this was simply a local operation. If so, this investigation reinforces the presumed intent of daily aerosol particulate spraying in the troposphere, observed worldwide, which has the consequence of causing 'global warming'.

Scientists worldwide should call for, and indeed demand, a full and open investigation into these covert geoengineering activities whose potential impacts on Earth's climate system, the integrity of Earth's biota, and on human health may prove to be extremely hazardous.

ESG - socialism disguised as free market capitalism

AS a State Treasurer, I operate at the intersection of politics and capital markets, squarely where ESG resides. Many are afraid to speak out about it, but people need to understand the threat that it poses to our system, one based on free-market capitalism and constitutional principles.

ESG uses economic force to drive a political agenda through corporate America. As Larry Fink, CEO of BlackRock, the largest investment manager in the world, so succinctly stated: “You have to force behaviours, and at BlackRock, we’re forcing behaviours.”

BlackRock manages $10 trillion of other people’s money. Other investment managers have trillions more. Unelected by anyone, they are using the might of other people’s capital to drive a far-left agenda. Arguably, no one outside the federal government has more power, and few people outside the industry know what’s going on.

There’s a small tech company in my state of Utah that employs fewer than 75 people. A Silicon Valley tech titan was a client. Call it Twoogle. Last year, Twoogle explained to the company that if they wanted to continue to do business with Twoogle, they would need to implement a whole range of policies.

For example, the Utah company would have to provide six months of full pay and benefits for maternity and paternity leave. The company responded that Utah’s fertility rates are higher than other states, and offering the benefit to all employees would imperil the company financially. Since fewer than five employees served the Twoogle account, they asked if they could implement the policy for just those employees.

Twoogle said no, they must implement the benefit regardless of the financial impact.

That every employee knew what benefits the company offered before they agreed to work there was beside the point. The tech company was forced to drop Twoogle as a client - a serious blow.

And what about Twoogle? Presumably, they engaged the company because they had the best product at the best price. They, too, will pay a price for their policies when they move to the next-best provider. How is this good for Twoogle’s shareholders?

This is just one small example of how ESG plays out across our economy. Multiply it by a million.

ESG: Environmental, Social and (Corporate) Governance

by THENAKEDDOLLAR.BLOGSPOT.COM

ESG is a political scoring system for investors, with companies like S&P Global issuing ESG scores on corporations. It sounds great, right? In reality, ESG is dictatorship in capitalist clothing. Our banks, investment managers and corporations are all promoting ESG, cleverly lending ESG the veneer of free-market capitalism. But it is not capitalism.

Capitalism is freedom in an economic context. ESG is a system of force. ESG substitutes our pluralistic institutions for conformity to centralised power, one that makes up the rules as it goes. If you don’t believe me, think about the indeterminate nature of ESG. There are two layers of subjectivity: the determination of the ESG factors themselves and the answers to those factors. If you ask people what the factors should be, you will get different answers depending on their shade of politics.

Even if people agree on the factors, the answers as to what constitutes a ‘good’ or a ‘bad’ score for a particular factor also depends on whom you ask. Is British Petroleum bad because it sells oil or good because of its focus on developing alternatives?

This is an inherently political exercise, and ESG cedes power to the entities determining those two central questions. Government bureaucrats appear to be colluding with investment behemoths like BlackRock to make the agenda, and they use the threat of regulation and the power of our investment money to bully corporate America into carrying it out.

What would prevent new factors from being used as a weapon against the other side? For example, what if the government, under different party control, suddenly decided to use capital to favour donations to pro-life groups? I would oppose this on the same grounds. We need to keep our capital markets and businesses politically neutral.

Pension allocators, most of whom are government employees, are also in on the game. As one insider put it, they are “effectively creating law and enforcing it without voter input, debate, or even knowledge. Given their size, their standards flow downstream, changing everything.”

Why, you may ask, is any of this a problem for the average person? Well, why are gas prices so high?

In the past, capital would have flowed to traditional energy companies to fund profitable projects. With oil prices so high, there are plenty of projects to choose from. But these projects find themselves on the wrong side of this administration’s regulators and the ESG mob, so they don’t get funded. The result is less supply and higher prices.

The misallocation of capital leads to vital industries dying on the vine. This is not merely inflationary, but also a national security threat. We see this playing out in Europe right now, their own early version of ESG having largely banished much-needed fossil fuels. When Russia invaded Ukraine, their moral assessment of fossil fuels and firearms flipped. There’s no consistency with ESG.

When power is centralised, society suffers. Pluralistic institutions like free capital markets protect us from the tyranny of elite power.

On the other side of the ledger, ESG leads to asset bubbles in favored industries. The resulting bursts harm us all, as we saw in 2008 when the federal government forced banks to provide mortgages to high-risk borrowers in the name of social justice. The resulting defaults nearly brought down our economy.

ESG also leads to just plain bad investing, where high ESG scores trump mundane concerns like balance sheets and income statements. Solyndra, anyone?

If you’re in a large pension plan, these mistakes are being made right now in your portfolio. You will see it in the form of lower returns, which we are witnessing in ESG funds this year. When entire industries — fossil fuels, tobacco, defence, etc. — are excluded from your portfolio, returns will naturally suffer.

A City of London fund manager told The Light: “The ESG scores are created by the Index providers, and MSCI is the most dominant in this space. Index Funds (run by the likes of BlackRock, Vanguard, etc) are all transitioning away from typical passively managed funds to semi-passive funds utilising the ESG scoring system. They also use the Carbon Intensity score (CI) so that firms with high carbon emissions are omitted from the process. Generally speaking, asset managers utilise a quantitative approach whereby they will maximise the ESG score and minimise the CI score.

“This has ramifications because it means that firms are no longer looking to maximise returns for investors, but rather invest in companies that are politically correct. As Marlo Oaks eloquently puts it, ‘the political weaponisation of the corporate world.’”

There is no real transparency in how the scores are created, and given that asset managers tend to rely on these scores rather than their own in-house research, it is essentially ceding central control of a large part of the investment decision-making process to MSCI. Who at MSCI are making these decisions and what criteria are they using to determine whether a corporation is good or bad? Anyone with an ounce of common sense would realise that this is highly subjective and open to corruption (‘I’ll give you a backhander if you give me a better score’).

The performance of these ESG funds have underperformed the broader index (e.g. FTSE All-Share). Given that ESG funds command higher fees (around 0.1%) compared to a typical passively managed fund (0.02%), then everyone is laughing, except for the people who are actually invested in the funds.

Every single person who owns financial investments (actively or passively managed funds) needs to contact their manager and demand that they are not invested in ESG products. This is especially important for people who own pension funds because a large portion of their pension will now be allocated to these type of funds (the pension fund manager would have rubber stamped it with the investment manager without your consent). It is also important to note that that ESG is expanding into the fixed income space (corporate bonds) and not just confined to equities.

If enough people put pressure on their investment/pension managers, then maybe we have a chance of ending this.

5G ‘an experiment on the population’

Insurers fearful over potential claims for harm

NO ONE can say 5G is safe and yet local councils are rolling out 5G throughout the UK and without public consultation or consent, while the UK Government recently launched the £1 billion shared rural network deal to build 5G throughout the countryside.

This will relax planning laws for existing masts to upgrade to 5G and allow the increase in height of masts up to 25 metres, with new masts to be built to a maximum of 30 metres, along with a host of smaller masts up to six metres in height above buildings.

Councils are also encouraged to allow curbside infrastructure, such as antenna attached to lamp posts and bus shelters - and all without prior approval - to accelerate network upgrades with an aim to provide 5G coverage for the majority of the UK population by 2030.

The first study on the health effects of 5G by Professor Lennart Hardell and Mona Nilsson was published by the Swedish Radiation Protection Foundation on February 22, 2022. The study recorded a massive increase in radiation exposure levels resulting in immediate microwave sickness symptoms for residents living below the antenna.

Symptoms included fatigue, difficulty sleeping, nosebleeds, tinnitus, dizziness, skin problems, concentration problems, irritability, impaired short-term memory, confusion, depression, and heart palpitations.

The first cease and desist order was issued in April 2022 by the Board of Health, Pittsfield, MA. against a Verizon cell tower. Residents surrounding the tower suffered ill health shortly after the tower was activated in 2020.

Here in the UK, a landmark legal ruling in November 2021 took place at the Planning Court, Queen's Bench Division, High Court of Justice, London, with campaigners successfully claiming against Brighton and Hove Council with Hutchison 3G as the interested party.

The Honourable Mr Justice Holgate overturned the local authority approval for the 5G mast to be sited close to a primary school. The ruling found that the council “failed to address the health impacts” of the mast. The council was ordered to pay the claimants’ costs of £13,340. This finding has significant implications for all councils dealing with 5G applications - it means there is a legal responsibility to investigate effects on health.

Thousands of antennas and phone masts are still being deployed in heavily populated areas to advance ‘the internet of things’, allowing thousands of devices to connect to the network with a drive towards smart cities. The only safety compliance necessary, according to the UK government, is a statement that self-certifies that the International Commission on Non-Ionizing Radiation Protection (ICNIRP) guidelines are met.

The UK ICNIRP guidelines are based on the same principle as the U.S. standards and only protect against short-term heating effects of radiation and not the long-term biological effects. On August 13 last year in the U.S., Robert F Kennedy’s Children’s Health Defense (CHD) and the Environmental Health Trust successfully sued the Federal Communications Commission in an historic lawsuit against the FCC for ignoring 11,000 pages of scientific and medical evidence showing biological effects below the current guidelines, so we can no longer rely on industry assurances of safety.

Bioeffects have clearly been established to occur with very low exposure (non-thermal levels) to electromagnetic fields and radiofrequency radiation according to many doctors and scientists. The BioInitiative Working Group reviewed thousands of peer-reviewed scientific papers. This group of experts calls for the precautionary approach and urgent action due to chronic EMF-related diseases that are a potential risk for everyone.

These diseases include adverse effects on the central nervous system, cancer, both initiating and promoting effects, impairments of certain brain functions, loss of memory and cognitive function, infertility, and immune dysfunction.

Radiofrequency signals were classified as a possible human carcinogen in 2011 by the World Health Organisation International Agency for Research on Cancer. Evidence of increased cancer risks has since been strengthened by further human studies, as well as toxicology studies in animals, which demonstrated clear evidence of tumours from the U.S. National Toxicology Program and the Italian Ramazzini Institute study.

The Science and Technology Options Assessment Committee of the European Parliament published a review in June 2021: “Health impact of 5G. Current state of knowledge of 5G-related carcinogenic and reproductive/developmental hazards as they emerge from epidemiological studies and in vivo experimental studies.”

The review of research calls for a halt to the expansion of 5G and should be a clear warning for policy makers to put the brakes on. No adequate studies are available on 5G in the higher frequency range (24 to 100 Ghz). Therefore, the review describes 5G as ‘an experiment on the population’.

It’s worth noting that the $21 billion reinsurance company Swiss Re Group, which is one of the world’s leading reinsurance providers, rated 5G as a ‘high impact’ liability risk, citing concerns about its biological effects, and potential claims for health impairments. Despite this, the government is racing ahead with 5G rollout and the involuntary irradiation of the whole UK population.

Local councillors may not be aware that they could potentially be held liable for any harms caused by the policies they enact according to a UK lawyer, and should therefore check whether the council’s public liability insurance provides cover for adverse health effects caused by 5G.

Blowing apart the climate agenda

by VICTORIA PROSSER

PIERS CORBYN:
CO2 levels being used as a weapon of control

IN recent times the public consciousness has been flooded with myriad climate crisis information and a vague sense of impending doom from 'rising CO2 levels'.

Controlled opposition groups such as Extinction Rebellion and Just Stop Oil continue to engage in divisive actions in order to sour public opinion and ripen them up to support more draconian laws, a strategy employed by the government in order to generate public consensus for the tightening of rules should a real uprising occur.

It can be hard for the majority of us to make sense of what is really going on in regard to climate change. At the base of it all is the government's drive for 'net zero' amid reports of CO2 damaging the climate, rising sea levels and alarming weather events, and there are attempts around the world to curtail us and make us poorer to pay for the measures. Not many readers will trust anything the government reports nowadays, so who better to ask for some scientific insight than a highly qualified meteorologist, physicist and seasoned campaigner, Corbyn?

When I meet with him he had just recently been thrown out of the Bloomberg Sustainability Business Summit in London, despite being a registered delegate. They accused him of having covid-19 without any proof and forcibly ejected him before Sadiq Khan took to the stage. Corbyn tells The Light he is used to attempts to silence him, but that this time was particularly aggressive. I tend to be of the opinion that if authorities are using that much effort to shut you down, there must be some truth in what you are saying.

What are the lies of the climate crisis? Piers elaborates: "In a nutshell the CO2 'climate emergency' story says that the trace gas CO2 (0.04% of air) is the main 'control knob' of weather extremes and climate, and that man's CO2 – 4% of 0.04% of the atmosphere – is a major dangerous factor in this. Therefore, the story concludes, you must be taxed and controlled. Very convenient! The measures suggested will do nothing for the environment, in fact things that will help nature such as not cutting down trees are not even considered. The cost of everything is being pushed onto individuals, as well as an unnecessary guilt."

CO2 in the atmosphere, is an effect, and not a cause of temperatures and lags behind the climate by about 500-800 years

Here's Corbyn with a science lesson for us: "For the CO2 narrative to be true requires man's (4%) CO2 to control the rest of (96%) CO2 and for CO2 to be the main controller of temperature and climate. Both claims fail against science."

What about all the scientists who agree with climate change theory? "Well it is said to be 97% of scientists, but this was actually a survey of how many papers mentioned CO2, and when this figure was analysed by Dr Legates*, it was found that only 0.3% actually supported the theory that is being used to make vast changes to our lives now.

"In the long run, CO2 levels are an effect, not a cause, of changes in temperatures. Sea temperatures rule CO2 as the oceans hold 50 times more CO2 than the atmosphere. If the sea warms, CO2 is released (like warming a glass of fizzy drink) and if it cools it absorbs CO2 from the air. This happens on a daily/weekly/monthly/yearly basis and on average, CO2 in the whole atmosphere stays around for a few years before going back into the upper levels of the ocean or into the soil; CO2 levels in these relatively small changes lag behind temperature changes. On longer time scales, extra CO2 emitted from the sea surface gets swallowed up into the cold deep ocean by currents and emerges 500-800 years later in the air over the Pacific after a long deep sea trek. So, the amount of CO2 in the atmosphere, over the long run, is an effect, not a cause, of temperatures and lags behind the climate by about 500-800 years."

Interesting points that are more than worthy of further research and rumination. Many will ask why exactly this dramatic storyline is taking place.

Corbyn: "Corrupt scientists and fake data are being used. Power is being sought through control mechanisms. The World Economic Forum has been building up to this for a long time. There are four legs and a tail to the New World Order. The pandemic; the climate con which becomes almost religious and so can justify almost anything. The third and fourth legs are physical attacks, being the jabbing and the 5G. The tail is the digital identification system. We must break each one of these legs by resisting; for example, to resist digital ID we must keep cash."

No one wants to feel powerless in the face of such might being used to mislead us and deny our freedoms. So Corbyn explains: "We are all local leaders. We must build our own leaders up rather than rely on existing politicians or structures. We cannot continue to propagate the idea of main political parties having a monopoly of power. The state will resist, but in the process of this conflict new things will emerge from action on the ground.

"We are not like-minded people joining together, we are like-purposed people seeking to stop this agenda. Never forget that mass understanding of the big picture is how we will defeat the New World Order."

BBC: Ministry of truth

by PAUL MERRICK

OVER the past 40 years, the BBC has transformed itself from the most trusted news source in the world into the British Brainwashing Corporation. It has a clear left-wing agenda which it pushes remorselessly while still proclaiming its lack of bias.

Its coverage of Brexit was a disgrace: a report, entitled 'Brussels Broadcasting Corporation?' published by think tank Civitas, in conjunction with News-Watch, monitored thousands of hours of television and radio shows, including the flagship Radio 4 programme Today. Of 4,275 guests on Today who discussed the EU between 2005 and 2015, only 132 (or 3.2%) were Brexiteers. The BBC became the propaganda arm of the EU.

In 2019, the BBC spearheaded the creation of the Trusted News Initiative (TNI), together with news and media organisations including Google, Facebook, Twitter, the Financial Times and the New York Times. The TNI was ostensibly established to protect audiences from 'disinformation which threatens human life or disrupts democracy during elections'. The participants would make interventions 'to address misinformation across the media landscape'.

On the face of it, these were noble intentions, but since the fake pandemic these interventions have mutated from exposure of fake news to repression of free speech. The truth has become whatever the BBC says it is, and so it censors information it finds unpalatable, all the while continuing to proclaim its lack of bias.

There is now total censorship of all information that deviates from the agenda of the public health agencies. For example, Anthony Fauci, chief medical adviser to the U.S. President, concluded that there was no evidence to support the claim that ivermectin was effective against covid-19. But, as documented on ivmmeta.com, there are over 70 studies pointing to ivermectin's efficacy at reducing mortality and hospitalisation.

These include 31 randomised controlled trials, 7 meta-analyses, 32 observational controlled trials, multiple country case studies, expert opinion and patient testimony, all in favour of the medication. The BBC ignored this and has campaigned to undermine the use of ivermectin saying that there is 'insufficient evidence' to recommend it.

The TNI's official line is that the project would not prevent "legitimate concerns" about vaccines being aired, but would attempt to stop "harmful disinformation myths". However in practice, the legitimate concerns of respected doctors, scientists and researchers are not permitted to be aired. When a founder of the mRNA technology, Dr Robert Malone, is censored and his videos removed, the TNI organisations are doing exactly what they said they would not do. What distinguishes the BBC from the other TNI organisations is that I and all other licence payers are forced to finance its deceit under threat of a criminal record.

So what's to be done? I have taken to complaining to the BBC whenever I notice prejudice in its reporting, either in what it says or what it omits. For example, in the summer of 2021, I participated in one of many Freedom Marches through central London together with hundreds of thousands of others. There was not a mention of this in that evening's BBC television news which did, however, cover a much smaller pro-Palestinian rally on the same day (a cause the BBC favours). In responding to my complaint about this, the BBC's defence was that it did not have time in its bulletins to report on all news stories of the day. I pointed out that in the early evening bulletin that day it had found time to report that Tom Cruise had donated one of his jumpers to a charitable cause. In response to this they could only repeat their 'lack of time' excuse.

I do not fool myself that my complaints will achieve anything apart from venting my frustration and anger at an organisation I used to admire. And, of course, the BBC will not admit it is wrong. But if, instead of one complaint, every lie, distortion and blatant omission generates a thousand, then, at the very least, this will cause the BBC considerable inconvenience. They aim to respond to complaints within a fortnight so it would force them to hire additional staff to deal with the volume of complaints, which would also appear in the official figures on customer dissatisfaction.

Psychological manipulation of health staff by ‘charity’

by BRIAN GERRISH &
DEBBIE EVANS

A FORMER government advisor has given a terrifying insight into how a pandemic of bullying and fear has taken hold in the health service resulting in catastrophic failures, manipulation of staff and alarming patient abuse.

Debbie Evans, who worked at the Department of Health, began to investigate the activities of a charity called Common Purpose, which had come onto our radar here at UK Column.

We were interested in exploring how this so-called charity became involved in selecting future health service managers and witnessed firsthand the manipulation of people and their values, which were morphed into a specific sector of the health service called NHS Leaders. These supposedly were fast-tracked people who were going to lead the NHS into even better healthcare.

As these leaders with their newly acquired values were unleashed, the management style in the NHS became increasingly domineering and bullying. The ideas became less and less about the care and treatment of people who were ill or injured, and it became much more about the importance of profits and money within the NHS. It was apparent that the psychology of people was being manipulated.

The UK Column website has an article entitled Towards a Million Change Agents. That was a paper written by an NHS Common Purpose-trained individual who said that in order to reach a future utopia, the NHS was going to need a million change agents.

They mean people who are going to disrupt the performance of the NHS in order to get it to transition, to transform into what was supposed to be a world class health provision.

These people were installing themselves in UK cities, effectively taking control of politics within those cities. Within a few years, that organisation was operating overseas in countries like Germany, Holland, India and Australia, where they were recruiting people to bring them within an agenda of change agents, to change the way we think and conduct our business in society.

This organisation was started in about 1985 when the chief executive

As these leaders with their newly acquired values were unleashed, the management style in the NHS became increasingly domineering and bullying

Julia Middleton said she learned some amazing things about how to change society in the U.S. Common Purpose was funded by major banks that were never disclosed but a leak showed Deutsche Bank was one of them. This was a key example of an organisation you couldn't track. You couldn't see the documents, you couldn't see the people, and you couldn't see that it was unleashing a plan to change our society without the average member of the public understanding this.

An example of applied psychology during the covid crisis is that mantras were introduced in the NHS. Nurses and doctors started to follow them instead of medical decisions. A highly qualified doctor told us that when an unvaccinated covid patient came in, the mantra was: 'Covid unvaccinated death pathway, covid unvaccinated death pathway'.

These mantras have been driven through the NHS to the extent that doctors told us they cannot discuss genuine government figures on vaccine adverse reactions because the person simply turns away, refuses to talk to them or becomes very aggressive. They are witnessing cognitive dissonance in individuals, which is the result of their mental values being reframed.

We are certainly seeing the application of psychology in many areas in the NHS, and its overall effect is a degradation of healthcare treatment to the extent that people are being killed, when they could have survived quite happily had they been given the right treatment.

What we've got unleashed on us now is a subliminal attack on our minds. And until we bring the full light to this, it's going to be very, very difficult for us to take the lid off what these people are doing through their covid and vaccination attack on people. Each of the pharmaceutical companies has access to this psychological weapon. Each of the law firms and NGOs.

Everywhere we see charities, industry and public bodies working with the British government, we know that the use of the psychology is shared between them.

A well-qualified psychologist said to me: "People who are intelligent and have highly questioning minds can be more susceptible to the use of hypnosis, reframing, and applied psychology than somebody who is less intelligent and has less of an enquiring mind."

It is very wrong if anybody thinks, 'Well, I'm a bright person, I'm intelligent, I'm highly qualified. This wouldn't affect me'. On the contrary, you may be more vulnerable. There are NHS professionals that I'm speaking to that are completely confused. They're having a cascade of information every single day. Things are changing. They don't know why.

"I am seeing NHS professionals doing things that would be completely alien to them: 'I'm giving respiratory depressants to respiratory patients'. It's just alien to what we have been taught. So, people are frightened. What we are seeing is a political system integrated with huge commercial companies, pharmaceutical companies unleashing an agenda which has been to test vaccines on a population without any care for the damage and the dying."

People who have been subjected to this form of reframing or mind manipulation are victims, and therefore need to be treated in a very gentle and reassuring way.

Because if we come at them in a blunt way to try and make them see the truth, the result is that either they become very hostile – with cognitive dissonance – or possibly they're going to become mentally unwell as a result of the immense assault on their value system.

It is very significant that in all the documentation about the British Government's use of applied psychology to get its political agenda enacted, there is absolutely no assessment of what the adverse effects of such psychology may be on people who perhaps have underlying mental health issues, anxiety, or depression.

Indeed, where people have got undiagnosed mental health conditions - so they're not even aware that they've got a problem - when somebody is using this psychology on them, you can do immense damage. And I believe it is no coincidence that the official statistics in UK now show that the lockdown policy has caused a huge surge in suicides and mental illness, and particularly tragically, amongst young people.

But again, we can demonstrate that the UK government is hiding or manipulating the data sets that show this, or they're using applied psychology in the way they present those data sets to the public in order to further mislead us.

Vaccine harassment is backfiring

Pressuring people to take the vaccine is making them resist

by RICHARD HOUSE

A FRIEND recently texted me in some distress; she and her husband were being pestered and harassed by the NHS over vaccines. She has a pile of NHS appointment letters, ranging from covid booster reminders for her husband to scheduling flu vaccinations for her children, and her youngest's pre-school booster.

Her phone pings almost daily with NHS alerts and reminders. "We are reasonable people, but we feel pursued in a way that has damaged our confidence in the credibility of medical services", she told The Light.

She also recounts how some friends have been similarly pestered, writing of her disgust at the use of the so-called family services to act as the salespeople for pharmaceutical and state interests – with health visitors routinely alerting the NHS about children not being up-to-date with their vaccinations.

Are these happenings straws in the wind of a wider change in society, with Big Pharma and the state having drastically overreached themselves with the experimental gene therapy injection masquerading as a vaccine? With more families now being healthily sceptical about the efficacy of vaccines more generally, we can expect such panicked NHS bullying tactics to escalate.

An enormous pile of literature exists that comprehensively deconstructs the junk, zombie science underpinning vaccine-centred public health discourse. In a recent interview, one of these writers, Neil Z. Miller, said the following: "[in our research] we discovered that children who'd received vaccines were anywhere from four to over twelve times more likely to develop various negative or adverse health outcomes... so the unvaccinated children are healthier in these respects, in comparison with these children receiving these multiple vaccines." (Full interview at <https://tinyurl.com/3wffz22x>). On our website, we list the six peer-reviewed studies evidencing what Miller is saying here.

No wonder Robert Kennedy Jr. said the following in a recent interview with journalist Tucker Carlson: "None of the 72 vaccines that are currently mandated for our [U.S.] children has been safety tested against a placebo in pre-clinical trials." Certainly, anyone who has read Kennedy's spellbinding book The Real Anthony Fauci must end up with the view that genuine scientific truth just doesn't matter any more, as an all-powerful Big Pharma, along with its Big Tech side-kicks, has completely captured modern culture, science and politics.

There are signs that public opinion

None of the 72 vaccines that are currently mandated for our [U.S.] children has been safety tested against a placebo in pre-clinical trials is indeed shifting on the vaccines question. In Iowa, for example, a recent poll found that Iowans' support for non-covid vaccine requirements in schools is eroding, with only 34 per cent of Iowan adults now saying all children should be required to receive standard shots unless they have a doctor-signed medical exemption. That figure is down from 59 per cent supporting such a requirement in 2015. And even more tellingly, 28 per cent of adults now think Iowa should have no law on childhood vaccinations – up from just 16 per cent in 2015.

If these are indeed straws in the wind presaging a major cultural shift in vaccine-confidence levels across the world, it's looking as if the covid jab may well prove to have been a massive own goal for Big Pharma – and a nightmare for the World Economic Forum and Bill

Gates, determined as they are to vaccinate the world's population continually.

Perhaps, for once, Gates recently spouted some sense, when he said in November 2021 in a Bloomberg Forum, speaking of the covid jab: "Statistically we didn't do as well as I would have expected... [You could almost say that] the politicisation of taking vaccines... has been a step backwards. I hope vaccine acceptance for other diseases like measles is not reduced by this" – with the fringe minority of anti-vaxxers that existed before the covid vaccine having been transformed into what Gates himself now terms a 'meaningful minority'.

Del Bigtree, speaking on March 24 said, "they have failed in the greatest possible way: they took what was about a 90 per cent vaccine confidence in the USA and have reduced it to below 50 per cent." Despite the CDC's official recommendation for all Americans to get the third booster jab, only 28 per cent have taken it, as of March 2022. So Gates' meaningful minority has become a clear majority – at least in the USA. Keep up the great work, Mr Gates.

As the mass-vax junk-science ideology continues to unravel and disintegrate, just watch the NHS vaxxer pressure and harassment escalate. Those who embrace natural immunity and bodily autonomy, and who eschew a fear-saturated approach to nature, must and will stand strong against it.

The Bible has never been translated properly in English

by CHRISTOPHER SPARKES

The word of God has been lost in time. Meanings have been doctored to hide great truth

THESE are prophetic times. Millions march in protest against lies and cover-ups. Hear the thundering hoofbeats of “distress of nations in perplexity, a resounding of sea and a rolling surge of waves, men fainting from fear and an expectation of what is befalling the inhabited world.” (Luke 21/25-26).

‘Truth has stumbled in the street.’ Not my words. The Old Testament prophet, Isaiah (chapter 59, verse 14). “Truth is found missing” (verse 15).

Truth has stumbled in every institution. Churches too. And their bible versions. Somebody has just written to me, “Something has always felt ‘off’ with the Bible” (thank you, Andrea).

Off... yes.

They’ve doctored the language of angels and quenched the sparkle of the prophets.

But where lies abound, truth-tellers arise.

The Divine light-switch flicked on and blazed for me with glorious light the day it arose in my heart and I wanted to know the real messages of the prophets and apostles, not regurgitated orthodoxies.

In August 1997, with a fire inside me for the single extremely expensive pearl of one truth, and inspired by William Tyndale also burning in my heart, I knew I had to make a translation to recover the buried truths.

Over the 25 years since then, after many tens of thousands of hours of labour and research, far more has become apparent than I dreamed of in my lakeside vision of 1997.

The word of God has never been translated properly in the English language.

Every major theme has been shipwrecked. How have Bible readers not been complaining? Words have been added; words taken out; nouns and adjectives, verbs and

They’ve doctored the language of angels and quenched the sparkle of the prophets. But where lies abound, truth-tellers arise adverbs, pronouns and prepositions grammatically misrepresented; punctuation misapplied; meanings altered. Everything major is disturbed: the order of the books; the right books; who God is; who Jesus is; creation; who ‘the Holy Spirit’ is; what ‘the holy spirit’ is; man’s structural identity; man’s destiny; election; Jesus’s death; Jesus’s resurrection; the success of Jesus’s new covenant; the promise to the patriarchs; what ‘Lucifer’, ‘satan’ and ‘devil’ really mean; the identity of the house of Israel and God’s faithfulness; the gospel message; Paul’s work; even the immortality of God.

A translated work should translate back the same. Why, then, do the institution bibles have the phrase “before the world began” (2 Timothy 1/9, Titus 1/2), when the only word they have right is “before”? The rest is made up – and false.

This is an organic translation work, not processed like the doctored institution versions. Increasingly astounded and kept awake by all that I was discovering, I formulated strict translating laws, so that the bright-shining jewels of my findings could be justified, explained, and persuasive, the organic translating laws of: grammar, internal harmony, logic, research, text. These stand as impregnable fortresses. The organic translating laws produce richer soils for life-giving fruits and crops.

The preface to Keys of the Kingdom gives many examples. The old English King James Bible (1611) violates grammar. It has “world”, a concrete singular noun, instead of “eons” or “ages”, a plural abstract noun. It mistranslates proper nouns (names): “Greeks” as “Gentiles”; “the Valley of Hinnom” as “hell”. At John 1/3 it renders a singular aorist active intransitive stative verb (“has arisen”) into a plural passive imperfect transitive dynamic verb, “were made”, to smuggle in orthodoxy - wildly wrong, destroying the force of John’s prologue. It has the Old Testament books in the wrong order, wrecking internal harmony.

I formulated ‘translating targets’: accuracy and verbal precision, so that the exact truths are recovered; clarity, so that everybody can understand every part and nothing is obscured by clumsy, difficult or archaic English writing; literariness, so that the God-given literary styles and devices of the prophets and apostles are honoured as closely as is reasonable. Literariness includes poetical figures such as “eyelids of the dawn”, “lords of the wing”, and “daughters of music” for which, respectively, church versions manage only “sunrise” and “birds”.

The truth of God is “twenty hundred thousand times more joy” (Shakespeare) than the orthodox word of man.

That there should be tampering with the silver syllables of the divine books, which millions have paid for with their lives, is the greatest scandal in literary history.

Keys of the Kingdom is designed to make Bible-reading clear, everything made comprehensible for everybody, without impediments. It reveals the truth of the prophets and apostles which should be the only truth ever to have been broadcast. Subject headings, footnotes and appendices provide explanations and elucidations, always in mind of giving the witness of God and making everything clear to everybody, especially new readers.

The writings of the prophets and apostles oppose lies and distortions of the institutions of the rulers of this world. Now we have the rich ORGANIC fruits from the gardens of God, the prophets and apostles restored. The word of God is THE prophetic book for our time.

Counties destruction

DID you know that Edward Heath’s government FORCIBLY changed all our traditional counties in 1974, by only pushing the 1974-created counties, ignoring all objections, and later pretending that the post-1974 counties have always existed throughout history?

This still carries on today, upsetting millions, and leaving millions more in total ignorance of important county history. Why is that, as history is a neutral subject, nothing to do with politics, has it?

The present situation is unfair, as people were used to the old counties, Westmorland, Cumberland, the

by PAM MOORHOUSE

Ridings of Yorkshire, etc, names inherited from our ancestors, once used for everything.

In Scotland, counties dissolved into about seven regions, then were brought back in the 1990s, but still not quite the same. In Wales, everywhere, from Glamorgan to Caernarfonshire, has been mucked around with endlessly. Check out Wales’ ‘preserved counties’, created in 1996, for the definition of mad.

People have to put up with “Cumbria” instead of Westmorland/ Cumberland, West Yorkshire, North Yorkshire, South Yorkshire. Liverpool in Merseyside instead of part of Lancashire. Middlesex was hit in the 60s. Huntingdonshire is now just a council. Berkshire messed around with. So too Hampshire, Durham, Northumberland... and on and on.

These names are also used historically, so “smuggling in 16th century Cumbria”, or Turner the Artist visiting the North Yorkshire Coast and Cumbria in 1800, 200 years before these places existed. People are told by the local council that ‘it’s always been West Yorkshire’.

Totally wrong! Yorkshire was divided into three Ridings, or “thirdings” – three parts – by the Vikings, and used for everything until chopped into the various bits, plus Cleveland and Humberside, by Ted Heath’s bullies in 1974.

Why was our history destroyed? To please the EU, or Common Market as it was? Standard answer – definitely not! Or how about for “admin”, rearranging local government for more efficiency, as the government told us in 74? “The changes you see are for admin only and will not affect county loyalties, nor are they intended to...”

So why alter our history by saying that the Beatles lived in Merseyside in 1964 – 10 years before it was created? What county is Coronation Street now in? Millions believe the wrong information, “killing” interesting information, our roots, our culture, our history, forever! Why? Orwell may provide a clue from 1984: ‘He who controls the past controls the future.’

Freedom of speech: a sovereign right that must be protected

Legal battle for woman jailed over five-year-old Facebook posts

“IT is a poor service to the memory of the victims of the Holocaust to adopt a central doctrine of their murderers” - Noam Chomsky.

Freedom of speech has been fought for over many generations. A right that isn’t always popular to defend but a right which must be defended at all costs. As Voltaire said: “I do not agree with what you say, but I’ll defend to the death your right to say it.”

Throughout European history, people have had to fight for free speech especially whenever governments fear the people’s criticism. One such case highlights its importance. From 1672 to 1676 King Charles II attempted to ban coffee-houses in the realm:

‘Whereas it is most apparent, that the Multitude of Coffee-Houses of late years set up and kept within this Kingdom... have produced very evil and dangerous effects... for that in such Houses, and by occasion of the meetings of such persons therein, diverse False, Malicious and Scandalous Reports are devised and spread abroad, to the Defamation of His Majesty’s Government.’

by ORLANDO CLARKSON

(Proclamation for the Suppression of Coffee-Houses 1676 published in The London Gazette)

After less than two weeks, the King was forced to retract the proclamation due to the public outcry at this blatant attempt by the government to take away the right of freedom of speech. Free and unfettered speech is always a danger to governments who infringe on the rights of the people, as it is known that open rebellion is never far away when the people become aware of their mistreatment.

We are facing a crisis of freedom of speech today all across the world. As well as the social media bans, the hounding of alternative voices from the legacy and failing corporate media, the sackings for those who say the wrong thing, the liberticidal legislation being pushed through parliaments worldwide, we are now seeing worrying examples of people being imprisoned due to so-called ‘hate speech’.

On Friday, January 14 this year Tahra Ahmed was convicted of ‘incitement to stir up racial hatred’ at the Old Bailey in London. Dominic Kennedy writing for The Times newspaper brought to light two Facebook comments from 2017 that Ahmed had made.

On the basis of those comments the Campaign Against Antisemitism brought the charge to the court. This being the first case of its kind in the court, which is normally concerned with the crimes of murder and rape, it was assumed by many that the case would be thrown out. Indeed, two doctors’ letters had been sent to the judge explaining that Ahmed was not fit to stand trial as she was suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder on account of the treatment she had allegedly faced from the Metropolitan Police during her six-day-long detention.

She claimed that due to the pain of her ribcage being crushed when police had held up her handcuffed hands behind her back she had blacked out and awoken to the smell of her own vomit and with policemen and women laughing at her predicament. Yet these letters were ignored by the judge and the trial went ahead. On February 11, she received concurrent custodial sentences of 11 months and six months.

At the time of writing, Ahmed is currently confined at HMP Downview, having served more than six weeks of her sentence at another site: HMP Bronefield. She was surprised to find that one inmate convicted of selling drugs is serving a shorter sentence, with a strong chance of early release; something Tahra is not eligible for as she is considered a ‘danger to the public’. Such is the state of justice in Great Britain in 2022.

The precedent which has been set should be of concern to all that live in the UK. How many comedians could potentially be brought to court over thoughtcrimes such as this one? This is not the first time the Campaign Against Antisemitism have caused a stir. It was this very same group which made efforts to bring down Jeremy Corbyn and many of his socialist allies in the Labour party in 2017/18.

Despite the inconvenient fact that many of the prominent Labour voices had made no antisemitic statements, the corporate media plastered their columns for months with opinion pieces claiming Corbyn and his allies were antisemitic racists, and the damage was done.

Could this be due to Corbyn’s interest in the rights of the Palestinians? This is an issue that Ahmed also feels strongly about. It is an issue that will never be given the attention it deserves.

Is there a future for freedom of speech in the UK? It seems that many politicians, journalists and commentators have not understood the difference between agreeing with what someone says and defending their right to say it. The removal of freedom of speech is one of the first steps which has always marked the beginning of historical authoritarian regimes. Now more than ever, it is incumbent upon an informed citizenry to speak out against this encroaching authoritarianism.

But what about antisemitism? Having experienced this myself (I am in fact a London-born Jew) antisemitism is indeed nasty and difficult to face. But how will we deal with it? Suppress it and push it underground? Or face it head-on? The beauty of freedom of speech is that it allows for incorrect ideas to be challenged. If it were somehow to be ‘the Jews’ who were behind the Great Reset scam, why then are the Israeli population one of the most vaccinated, sick and controlled nations today? Points such as this are what will begin to help those with prejudiced minds to reconsider their viewpoint.

Whatever your thoughts on the concept of freedom of speech, the evidence that this is a political stitch-up is compelling. In 2020 and 2021, Ahmed confronted senior police constables and explained that she would hold any policeman or woman personally liable in a court of law for any unlawful behaviour against freedom protestors. She also spent time educating and empowering people on their sovereign rights. It seems this could be the real reason for the moves against her. Why else would a national newspaper dig up something from five years ago that no Jew had seen or commented on? Thousands of people make the same erroneous claims every day and yet are not prosecuted and imprisoned.

Get ahead of shortages and continuing inflation

Always better to have it and not need it, than need it and not have it

I HAVE spent over thirty years working in or studying the logistics industry and all I can really say is that we do live in interesting times.

As you might have noticed, there appears to be a concentrated effort to disrupt the supply chain in all areas of commerce.

Though the price of fuel in the UK is at record levels, the real shocks are still to come. Talking to a local arable farmer the other evening, he casually mentioned that his main tractor used to cost just under £600 to fill two months ago; it is now over a £1000. That increase in costs is going to be passed onto the consumer. He is confidently predicting a £5 loaf of bread by the end of the summer.

Russia has deemed the UK a hostile nation so do you think we are going to be first in the queue for anything? Russia supplies a third of the UK daily diesel usage. In retaliation we are stopping the export of luxury cars to Russia. That will get Putin's tanks back in the shed.

I don't need to remind the reader that Russia and the Ukraine are responsible for 25 per cent of the world's grain exports. Currently there are no cargo ships collecting anything from the Black Sea ports. Russia is also a major producer of fertiliser products and one of its major customers is Brazil, another major exporter of grain-based products.

In just the last week the main Taiwan food distribution hub caught fire, as did a major hub for Walmart and dozens of other meat processing plants in the U.S.

We all know there is shortage of semiconductors on the market; Ukraine is a major supplier of the gases that are used in the manufacture of those chips.

Closer to home, the Spanish truck drivers' strike is growing in intensity and has been in effect for a week (Sunday 20/3/22). This is closing down horticulture, fishing and industry across Spain.

bullets. While the British version now seems to be booze, sausage rolls and bog rolls.

Once you have that what else? How do you plan for a complete breakdown of the existing supply chain? Is it even possible you can make a plan for such a series of events?

Is it possible to do jobs for next winter now? Obtain next winter's fuel at today's prices and store it safely?

Chop some wood if you are lucky enough to have a real fire or a log burner this spring for next winter.

Do you have some seeds that you could garden with in spring 2023?

At the end of this summer plant some winter crops for winter 2022 – 23.

Please remember, before the internet we had books, find some how to guides now, especially in charity shops.

What alternative energy can you use? Even if you live in a flat a camping solar panel can power a light or a phone.

Doing something is positive; even half a plan is better than no plan.

Watching the world this week was quite soul-destroying. So, I cleaned up some Brussel sprouts and turnips, parboiled them, cooled and then put in the freezer for soup next winter. Changed nothing in the world but my mood.

However, do expect Russia and China to create a new currency backed by commodities, and not a fiat-based system. Saudi Arabia is selling oil to China for Chinese Yuan and not the American Dollar. Russia and China are already trading in oil and gas and as have Iran been for many years.

Russia has already concluded trade and defence deals with Saudi Arabia, Nigeria and India. In my opinion, the petro-dollar has begun its decline as a reserve currency for the rest of the world.

In the last week, India has announced it is looking at the finer details of the new Russia-China currency.

We will have to watch and wait to see how the West and its bankers respond to an obvious destruction of the fiat-based Bretton Woods system of finance.

In closing, you may have missed a statement from the World Bank on Monday March 14. It urged people across the world not to hoard petroleum and food. It felt like that moment in an episode of the Simpsons when the newsreader tells the citizens to 'Panic Now!'

But of course, you are not going to panic - you have a plan.

Poland is restricting diesel sales to hauliers. A UK haulier had to send trucks back to Germany to fuel, due to the lack of diesel in Poland.

So, in just one week the UK supply chain for all products from Europe is compromised and fresh food is especially compromised. As Ian Fleming once wrote 'once is unfortunate, twice is a coincidence, three times is enemy action...'

So what can be done? A return to common sense and everything calms down but after two years of the Corona Craziness that is extremely unlikely to happen.

We take off our tinfoil hats and think 'oh bothers, we were right' and wish we had been wrong and go back to moaning on social media and sending witty memes to each other.

Look at supply-chain blogs, free logistics newsletters and see where real problems are. See what the industry is complaining about and what it is short of.

Use maritime trackers to see which ports are congested. Use aircraft trackers to see where the actual no-fly zones are and how air freight is being disrupted.

All this information is freely available on the internet and in real time. Once you have this data, apply it in your local area. What's missing in the supermarket? How much stock is on the shelves? How long until that item could be replenished? Who is complaining about local shortages of raw materials? Why is that factory not producing x, y, or z, etc.?

Do I have space to create a garden? If no space outside, a window ledge with leafy greens or a small indoor potato grow kit will do.

One of the things I am helping promote locally is a version of Guerrilla Gardening where those with spare garden space, usually due to age, can be put in touch with those with enthusiasm but no garden space and personal, local agreements made to create vegetable gardens which benefit both parties.

The energy Machine of Joseph Westley New Government but now vindicated by the Ener

Who would have believed at the beginning of the 21st century that there would be a branch of electricity physics yet to be discovered or understood? Little did we know that an invention had been made 40 years prior to 2022 that produced the radiant energy or cold electricity that Nikola Tesla had identified in the 1890s.

THE invention by Joseph Newman in the 1980s produced electricity in a completely different way to any conventional energy generating machine of this era, only to be quashed and called pseudo-science.

Electricity, unlike many other aspects of physics, has rarely been put into question since the writing of the main laws such as Faraday's law, Ohm's law and Ampere's law. These laws were all supported by Maxwell's unifying mathematical equations.

When these pioneers were writing these laws, and experimenting, to arrive at the understanding we have today about electricity, it had still not been conceived that electricity exists as both an endothermic and exothermic reaction. Yes there was and is a lot of built-up knowledge of how to use and manipulate electricity, yet there seemed to be two branches of physics study that did not connect.

One branch was electricity, for example; Voltage discovery; Faraday's law; Ohm's law; Ampere's law, Nikola Tesla's advancements with production and distribution of useful electricity.

The other branch was the Physics discoveries such as Max Planck and entropy; Einstein's photoelectric effect; and Bohr's model of the atom. There seemed to be something missing to connect all this scientific knowledge to actually explain electricity to the finite understanding from atoms to electrical power.

In October 2016, I was in South Wales University attending my weekly lecture on electric vehicles, a module of my Renewable Energy Degree.

It was my final year, in which I would produce a project on an electricity-related topic, this being the defining work for an undergraduate - their dissertation. I had decided to study the DC generator of Joseph Westley Newman, who claimed to have invented a generator that produced more power on the output than inputted, this being the holy grail of energy generation. This of course, under the modern understandings of electricity physics is impossible, due to entropy within an electrical system, yet my esoteric interests challenged this establishment view. Having read Patrick J Kelly's work, the PJK Book 3, a collection of alternative energy devices, I felt there was a good case for a new understanding. All it needed was the evidence and physics breakdown.

I had set myself on a course that was going to be interesting, if not defining in energy physics in history. Fast forward six years and I would find myself finishing a 'Masters of Research' at Swansea University at the ripe age of 57. Both universities had opposed my work with vigour, with Swansea stating:

"Please note: Joseph Westley Newman, whose work has been universally rejected by all credible scientific examiners, including the American National Bureau of Standards after they thoroughly examined his apparatus. We would, therefore, be extremely wary of endorsing any published which referred to Newman's 'Energy Machine'. The supervision team does not include the work of Joseph Newman in your thesis." Newman and his Energy Machine is labelled pseudo-science due to the National Bureau of Standards (NBS) test. I knew better from what I had learned and realised. We now have to wait the clock 40 years to reveal the truth that was committed against Joseph Newman, unbeknown at the time, Newman, the inventor of the first Endothermic Electric generator. Newman's machine defies the laws of physics, yet academia knows there is an Endothermic Electric Effect caused by Einstein's Electric field.

What is an Endothermic Electric Effect?

Endothermic means heat gain or energy gain, and is identified in an electric field charge by a temperature drop on the surface of the material of the system.

What this means is, the air around the charging electric field has had its energy removed to before becoming exothermic and thus proving beyond any doubt that Newman's claims were correct. All you needed to do to benefit from this energy gain was to come up with the correct design, which Newman had achieved. Newman had some success in that the "evidence before the patent office and [the district court] is overwhelming that Newman has built and tested a prototype of his invention in which the output energy exceeds the external input energy; there is no contradictory factual evidence". The master man Generator must be set within certain parameters and should NOT BE GROUNDED TO EARTH - there is no ground on the battery side of the Newman generator in Newman's design, as can be disseminated in his book. This adding of a ground earth by NBS (figure 3) during their testing, invalidates the NBS test; they actually altered the design of the machine, and presented their findings as evidence in the court case, and in so doing, committed fraud. The machine they tested had an altered design to the very machine Newman was attempting to patent. Newman stated this to the court and NBS at the time. Video footage of this can be seen in the documentary film made by Jon Fox Films in 2015.

The District Court ruled against Newman and deemed his machine unpatentable on the evidence supplied by NBS. Newman claimed that the NBS test was an attempt to discredit him and stop him obtaining a patent, which it did in 1989.

At the time of writing this, the U.S. Government agency NBS now known as NIST, are being investigated by the architects and engineers for 9/11 truth for what is claimed to be fraud and a 'cover up' of the science on what actually caused the twin towers and WTC Building no. 7 to collapse on 9/11.

the electric field due to the law of attraction. Opposites attract - in this case negative electrons from the air to the positive atoms of the charging electric field. Thus leaving the air cooler around it and generating a magnetic field around the electric field, with a high to low pressure directed towards the electric field, obeying the 2nd law of thermodynamics.

Newman, the physics world and academia did not know this. It was not until I studied the graphs of lithium battery charge at university in 2016 did this become apparent to me. An electric field charge is first endothermic promoting his invention yet his attempt to obtain a patent with The American Patent Office ended up in a court case from 1982-1989, with the judge requesting a special taskmaster to examine if Newman's claims were correct:

"The master reported that the results shown for the Newman device appear to conflict with the laws of thermodynamics and expressed scepticism concerning Mr. Newman's theory of gyroscopic energy and the conversion of mass to energy. The master stated that "there is no evidence corroborating Newman's scientific theory". However, the master also found concluded that even though the operation of Plaintiff's system seems contrary to recognized scientific principles, Plaintiff has demonstrated the operation of his system by very clear evidence and is therefore entitled to a patent if he otherwise satisfies the requirements of the Patent Statute.

Although this was the special taskmaster's findings, the judge then ordered that the machine should be tested by the National Bureau of Standards (NBS). This is when Newman became a victim of a fraud by this U.S. government agency.

World Health Organisation plans worldwide power grab

by VICTORIA PROSSER

Proposed WHO framework would deny everyone in the world bodily autonomy

BACK in December 2021, the World Health Assembly (WHA) adopted a decision entitled 'The World Together: Establishment of an intergovernmental negotiating body to strengthen pandemic prevention, preparedness and response'.

According to the EU, the proposed 'Pandemic Treaty' is a 'legally-binding framework, aiming to ensure that the world can better respond to global health threats in the future.' The WHA is the main governing body of the World Health Organisation, comprised of 194 member states including the UK and Ireland.

Lotte Knudsen, EU ambassador to the UN, claimed such a Treaty would allow countries to respond 'collectively, effectively and immediately' to future pandemics, and those words may send a chill through anyone who is aware of encroaching globalisation and potential impending loss of individual power.

The adoption of a WHO worldwide pandemic treaty would be an unprecedented step towards a centralisation of authority. This would inevitably lead to authoritarian approaches with private 'interests' involved, damaging not only to health but also to our democratic freedoms and values. German MEP Christine Anderson has spoken out against the WHO Pandemic Treaty which she accurately sums up as 'a direct attack on the rule of the people by the people'.

The Pandemic Treaty would be tied into the WHO's QR Verification Code project, intent upon creating a global digital data bank of eight billion people and currently under design by T-Systems, a company previously tainted by involvement in a corruption scandal in 2011.

This technocratic treaty will be put to the next World Health Assembly in Geneva in 2023, and voted on in 2024 - with the WHO themselves having stated that they 'could accelerate this timescale if a new health emergency is declared'.

Countries such as Ireland and Germany have indicated they will sign up for this, but in one example of a strike back, the sovereign people of Ireland have begun a popular online campaign for a referendum (you can visit Lawyers for Justice Ireland on Facebook for more information). Unsurprisingly, Russia and Brazil have been the only two countries to express "scepticism". Readers may be well advised to help or create pressure groups opposing this treaty as it is an attack on freedom of movement, bodily autonomy, sovereignty of our land, our digital and personal data and so much more.

Essentially, the threat will tie us all into the 'data twin' in a digitally controlled world, for which the infrastructure is already taking shape at speed. It leaves us open to having our rights stolen at the touch of a 'covid' or other hyperbole-themed button. Personal rejection of our own digitalisation and refusal to download apps or even own a smartphone are continuing actions to take to slow the speed of these technocratic control systems.

We are living in a situation where the Director General of the WHO recently thanked Bill Gates for sending a copy of his new book and openly claimed that he fully agrees 'we must act on covid-19's lessons so that we can deliver swift, equitable health solutions to prevent the next pandemic'. The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation is the second largest donator to the WHO and the largest private contributor, donating to the tune of $1 billion last year. It is no longer seen as a conspiracy theory to deduce that the New World Order is indeed working through the guise of the pandemic, with covid-19 as a tool to oppress freedom on every level.

The WHO treaty will tie all nations into obeying whenever a pandemic is arbitrarily declared - meaning lockdowns, enforced vaccination (WHO states a target of a minimum 70 per cent of the total population) and the censoring of information that can be declared as disinformation if it goes against the programme.

The WHO treaty will tie all nations to obeying whenever a pandemic is arbitrarily declared - meaning lockdowns, enforced vaccination and the censoring of information that goes against the status quo.

In the UK, we lived through the pain and economic hits when the fake pandemic was declared and we watched as many succumbed to 'following orders' as politicians assured them it was 'to save lives', using behavioural psychology models to hypnotise a major section of the population.

Covid-19 emergency legislation was implemented but as of the publication of this article, a Freedom of Information request on what remains law has not yet been answered.

What is clear is that across the world, countries have operated in tandem. It is difficult not to argue that the nation state is no longer in control and that almost all nations are following a protocol to usher in world governmental rule (even when some seem to be playing as a rogue state). Although individual countries such as Australia, New Zealand, Israel and of course China implemented even more draconian rules than the UK, we would surely be under an extremely rigid pressure from a legally binding international treaty as currently proposed by the WHA/WHO.

The WHO opened a public participation portal for feedback, but they, 'our government' and the media have done little to publicise it. Their website was flooded with traffic despite the covert nature of the launch, and Canadian journalist Kean Bexte tweeted that the site crashed due to the volume of submissions by concerned people. The consultation quietly closed on April 13, and it never asked the people if they wanted a treaty, but instead simply enquired as to what they believed it should contain.

That's why it's so important right now to research further on this matter, start spreading the word and lobbying. It would appear that the UK is not at this moment pursuing a covid agenda, and has switched the focus and the minds of the masses to the Ukraine and Boris Johnson's Prime Ministerial tenure; in the background the wheels of totalitarianism are still turning.

Do we want to give up further freedoms without a fight? When the world of full digital ID and the total control of individual countries by the WHO/WHA is looming, what will you tell your children if you don't oppose it? The planned Great Reset must become our Great Resist and for that we need a Great Awakening.

Ukrainian president causes uproar in Greece over Neo-Nazi fighter appearance

by PAUL BENNETT

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky's recent address to the Greek Parliament was overshadowed and darkened by the presence of members of the controversial Azov regiment.

President Zelensky has been regularly addressing globalist leaders and institutions in seeking support for the complex situation in Ukraine. The leader of Ukraine has also bizarrely spoken via video link at the recent Grammy music awards.

In a video address to the Greek Parliament, Zelensky allowed a video message from two ethnic-Greek Ukrainians who are members of the ultra-nationalist Azov Battalion.

Syriza leader and former Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras reacted on Facebook by stating: "The speech by members of the neo-Nazi Azov Battalion in the Greek Parliament is a provocation. The absolute responsibility lies with the Prime Minister Kyriakos Mitsotakis. He talked about a historic day, but it is a historic shame. The solidarity with the Ukrainian people is a given. But the Nazis cannot have a say in our Parliament."

Former Foreign Affairs Minister, Nikos Kotzias, was also angered by seeing members of the Azov Battalion and said: "The Greek government irresponsibly undermined the struggle of the Ukrainian people, by giving the floor to a Nazi. The responsibilities are heavy. The government should publish a detailed report of the preparation and contacts for the event."

Recently in March, Zelensky banned eleven main opposition political parties in Ukraine including the second-most popular party, the Opposition Platform for Life party (OPZZh). In the 2019 Ukrainian elections, the OPZZh won 13% of the national vote. In 2021, Zelensky signed decrees banning opposition media and TV outlets with pro-Russian stances.

Links to a questionable militia group and banning opposition political parties and media outlets is not the picture of a free and democratic country that Ukraine and global leaders like to continually portray to the world through their lackey media mouthpieces.

New Zealand

by PAUL BENNETT

HIGH Court in New Zealand rules against vaccine mandates for police and defence staff.

Police staff and defence forces in New Zealand have bravely stood up to a draconian government order requiring them to have two covid jabs by March 1, or face losing their jobs.

Three courageous unvaccinated staff, supported by 37 colleagues, challenged the order and sought a judicial review based on the right to decline a medical procedure and the right to religious freedom. Written affidavits were submitted to the High Court.

The High Court rightfully overturned the discriminatory mandate and deemed it unlawful. Justice Francis Cooke said: "The order limits the right to be free to refuse medical treatment recognised by the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act (including because of its limitation on people's right to remain employed), and it limits the right to manifest religious beliefs for those who decline to be vaccinated because the vaccine has been tested on cells derived from a human foetus which is contrary to their religious beliefs."

The New Zealand Herald reported: "The lawyer for the police and Defence staff at the centre of the claim is now calling for the suspended workers to return to their jobs immediately, saying many have given decades of service to their community and are still committed to their jobs."

Like a lot of world leaders, New Zealand Prime Minister and World Economic Forum plant, Jacinda Ardern, does not respect the will of the people and the law. The government in New Zealand have now filed an appeal against the High Court decision.

Ardern may have had a stranglehold on New Zealanders for a long time, but it is refreshing to see some Kiwis take back control from her dictatorship.

Scotland Loch Ness

Loch Ness monster considered an 'anti-Scottish' imperialistic symbol according to new school curriculum

by PAUL BENNETT

'WOKE' Scottish educators are rolling out a bizarre social studies curriculum to 11-14 year-old secondary school students, centred around the legendary and mystical Loch Ness monster.

The 17-page social studies lesson plan for secondary schoolteachers is to highlight the role British class structure and English dominance had on Scottish culture and in reinforcing negative Scottish stereotypes.

Lesson plans will include watching films about the Loch Ness monster, including the 1996 family drama 'Loch Ness' starring Ted Dawson and Joely Richardson. The 'educational' document states: "The very idea of a prehistoric monster in a loch affirms the stereotypical idea Scotland is a rural wilderness, perhaps one bypassed by progress. This is a very British idea of Scotland, propagated previously by upper-class tourists in the 19th century."

The social studies class also aims to encourage pupils to 'construct a view of wider contemporary topics relating to Scotland, such as the independence referendum'.

According to Chris McGovern, chairman of the Campaign for Real

Education: "It seeks to brainwash pupils into believing that Scotland is the victim of a wicked conspiracy to subvert and infantilise its identity. The nationalist cause must be in desperate trouble if it has to resort to such propaganda tactics with young people. My advice to teachers is to use the Nessie Plan itself as an example of how bias is used by educators."

Local tourism business owner, Willie Cameron, also affectionately known as 'Mr Loch Ness', optimistically told the Inverness Courier newspaper: "There is no such thing as bad publicity as far as Loch Ness is concerned. If it raises people's heads and creates debate, so much the better." He added, "I'm not overly impressed with some of the assertions within the lesson plan but so what?"

The Scottish National Party (SNP), under the leadership of dour Nicola Sturgeon, is clearly in election/referendum mode, by using 'Nessie' as propaganda to conjure up nationalist sentiments in young people.

Desperate times call for desperate measures!

When it comes to the truth, it's black and white.

MEPs roast Trudeau on visit to Brussels

by PAUL BENNETT

TWO Members of the European Parliament (MEPs) from Germany and Croatia gave a frosty reception to Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau over his disgraceful and unforgivable handling of the freedom loving truckers' protest in Ottawa.

In late March during a two-day trip to Belgium, Trudeau was at the European Union (EU) headquarters in Brussels, speaking about the situation in Ukraine and the recent Freedom Convoy in Ottawa. Addressing the EU parliament, Trudeau labelled the truckers and protesters in Ottawa as 'cynical populists'.

Croatian independent MEP, Mislav Kolakusic, faced down Trudeau in the EU parliament with some well needed home truths by saying: "Dear colleagues, dear citizens, Prime Minister Trudeau. Freedom. The right to choose. The right to life. The right to health. The right to work. For many of us [these] are fundamental human rights for which millions of citizens of Europe and the world have laid down their lives. To defend our rights, and the rights of our children, which we have acquired over the centuries, many of us, including myself, are willing to risk our own freedom and our own lives.

"Unfortunately, today, there are those among us who trample on these fundamental values. Canada, once a symbol of the modern world, has become a symbol of civil rights violations under your quasi-liberal boot in recent months. We watched how you trample women with horses. How you blocked the bank accounts of single parents so they can't even pay for their children's education and medicine. So that they can't pay utilities or mortgages for their homes."

Kolakusic finished by stating: "To you, these may be liberal methods. But for many citizens of the world, it is a dictatorship of the worst kind. Rest assured that citizens of the world united can stop any regime that wants to destroy the freedom of citizens, either by bombs or harmful pharmaceutical products."

German MEP, Christine Anderson, from the AFD group in the Parliament also grilled Trudeau on his blatant hypocrisy: "Based on article 195, I would like to point out that it would have been appropriate for Mr Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada, to address this house, according to article 144. An article which was specifically designed to debate the violations of human rights, democracy, and the rule of law which is clearly the case with Mr Trudeau.

"Then again, a Prime Minister, who openly admires the Chinese 'basic dictatorship', who tramples on fundamental rights by persecuting and criminalising his own citizens as terrorists, just because they dared to stand up to his perverted concept of democracy, should not be allowed to speak in this House at all."

Anderson concluded by saying, "Mr Trudeau, you are a disgrace for any democracy. Please spare us your presence. Thank you."

Both MEPs received a rapturous applause from some parliamentarians in the chamber after their takedown of Trudeau. The days of smug Trudeau holding court on a world stage and getting a warm reception everywhere he goes are now thankfully long gone.

Kiev is the globalists' key

by NIALL McCRAE

BACK in February, as Russian tanks rolled into Ukraine, I asserted in a live interview on Unity News Network that this was a contrived conflict in pursuance of the climate change agenda.

After the people who really run the world exploited a coronavirus to create a digital surveillance system for totalitarian control of the people, Ukraine is being used to advance control of resources. It's another great stride towards technocracy.

Of course, there was actual tension between Russia and Ukraine. The fighting that failed to materialise in February (when the Russian army surrounded Kiev) soon became very real in the Donbas area, where there had already been eight years of civil war between the Ukrainian military and ethnic Russian separatists. But this is merely a believable context for the bigger plan, just as we were primed to expect a killer virus erupting from the overcrowded cities of the Far East.

Two articles this week reinforce my argument on the underlying motive for war. For decades, the globalist strategy has been the engineering of emergencies: not only ensuring that no crisis goes to waste, but ensuring that no opportunity for a useful crisis is missed.

'A global energy crisis escalates', a front-page commentary in the New York Times (28 April 2022), warns of severe fuel shortages around the world following Putin's invasion. Helen Thompson, professor of political economy at the University of Cambridge, asked: "What does this mean for the most existential issue of all – climate change?" Thompson can hardly hide her enthusiasm for the oil shock, as she predicts a gaining momentum in the shift from fossil fuels to renewables.

"For the green transition, the renewed public awareness that the supply of hydrocarbons does not take care of itself, even as Western governments promise to curtail their use, is – paradoxically – a step forward."

Unfortunately, the West cannot simply convert from carbon combustion to wind power in one fell swoop. Thompson sees Joe Biden in a bind: he cannot survive electorally if he repeats the words of past President, Jimmy Carter, who told Americans to 'wear a sweater' to reduce their fuel consumption. Necessarily, Biden is taking the short-term approach of releasing millions of barrels from the federal oil reserve to curb pump prices. Inflation in the USA is nearing ten per cent.

But, as Thompson noted, the Democrat constituency is also populated by professional-bureaucratic metropolitans, who demand progress to a zero-carbon economy. She refers to the slump in shale gas supplies, but the reservoirs are vast. The reason is purely political: and to the detriment of the ordinary people. Since the success of Al Gore's scientifically dubious but massively influential book and film An Inconvenient Truth, the Democrats have become climate change zealots.

Thompson is author of another apocalyptic treatise: Disorder: Hard Times in the 21st Century. Climate crisis actors will stop at nothing to make life hard and disorderly. This brings me to the second article on saving the Earth by military proxy.

'Operation Thermostat: energy rationing and the pivot from Ukraine to climate' is an alert by Off-Guardian writer Kit Knightly to the coming curtailments on your ability to heat and eat. Italy is the first country to begin fuel rationing after cutting the flow of Russian oil and gas. For the next twelve months, public buildings are barred from running air conditioning at lower than 25 degrees or heating above 19 degrees. Globalist puppet Prime Minister, Mario Draghi, asked Italians: "Do we want to have peace or do we want to have the air conditioning on?"

We fight Putin by fighting climate change, governments will be telling citizens, like the Dig for Victory messaging in the Second World War. Knightly reminds us that 'lockdowns were marketed as planet-saving almost from the moment they were put in place'. And now the war in Ukraine is a stopcock on fuel lines.

The European Commission is keen on contributing to this important new front of the Great Reset, taking a guilt trip on oil:

'We have profited from it and created enormous wealth at the expense of planet Earth, and, as we realise right now, at the expense of geopolitical imbalances (with dependency on Russia). Both need to be repaired. In order to repair them we need to pay more for energy – and also for food. The two basic needs of life – food and energy – we have paid way too little for in the past 40 years.'

So there you have it – the EU wants you to be impoverished. Italy is its testing ground, as Canada is for North America, and Australia for the southern half. The West wants the theatre of Ukraine to continue for as long as it takes to teach people to accept total resource control. Kiev, with its World Economic Forum stooge, Volodymyr Zelensky, is the key to the new world order.

China builds cheap coal plants while West suffers energy crisis

CHINA was responsible for more than half of the new coal power station capacity being built across the world last year, with 176 gigawatts of new coal-fired power station projects commenced.

More coal than ever was burned last year, despite the COP26 agreement for nearly every country to scale back their coal use. The amount of electricity generated from coal rose by 9% in 2021. As gas and oil become more expensive, Asian countries are giving themselves the economic advantage Western nations had in the 19th century. In recent decades, however, much of the West has dropped coal and gas in favour of wind turbines and solar panels, which are not sufficient to provide constant power for modern societies.

The number of coal power stations is actually growing in Asia, as new constructions more than offset the closure of old plants.

by DARREN SMITH

India, South Korea and Malaysia also increased their coal capacity in 2021, according to the Global Energy Monitor.

Corporate media outlets such as New Scientist and The Guardian are only wringing their hands at the prospect that all of this natural, cheap energy production will raise the Earth's temperature beyond the 1.5 degree figure agreed at the COP26 summit in Glasgow in 2021.

Proof that a vague and unproven ideology means more to these publications than the average person's general standard of living, which is clearly declining rapidly through these misguided but no doubt lucrative political choices.

"It's a mixed story. Everywhere outside of China, plans for new coal-fired power plants have been scaled back dramatically," says one of the report's authors, Lauri Myllyvirta at the Centre for Research on Energy and Clean Air. "However, Chinese firms have continued to announce new coal-fired power stations and there is very clear government backing for that. That's a worrying sign."

The Light paper has been publishing articles on the energy crisis for over a year, as many industry experts have been warning about it, horrified at the deliberate political destruction of Britain's once world-leading energy infrastructure.

Those who have bought into climate agenda, formerly known as 'the weather' (over which we have no control), have clearly been led to believe so by a decades-long campaign from the establishment to convince them the impossibility of 'saving the planet' is of more importance than their own individual needs. When one is hungry, cold, sick or hopeless, how helpful will this dangerously misguided collectivist philosophy be?

U.S. Army to test drone swarm in Utah desert

A SWARM of military drones will be launched over the Utah desert as part of an international field training exercise in May, according to a report published by The War Zone.

The swarm will comprise 30 small drones for a dual air-assault mission.

Major General Walter Rugen, head of the Army's Future Vertical Lift Cross-Functional Team, told The War Zone:

"I think what you're going to see is an expansive use of electronic warfare and an expansive use of our interactive drone swarm.

"We feel like we're going to be flying the largest interactive drone swarm ever in partnership with DARPA and our science and technology experts out of Aviation and Missile Command."

The test will occur at the Army's 2022 Experimental Demonstration Gateway Exercise, which runs from April 25 to May 12 at Dugway Proving Ground near Salt Lake City, Utah. The service will use a combination of ALTIUS 600 and Coyote drones by Raytheon.

ALTIUS 600's range is about 276 miles and can operate for four hours. Depending on payloads, the drone weighs 20-27 pounds and can be outfitted with a warhead for offensive missions. Meanwhile, Coyote drones provide reconnaissance.

by TYLER DURDEN

The drones will be launched from an assortment of aircraft and ground vehicles.

"We'll be launching them pretty much, you know, Monster Garage-style, any way we can," Rugen said. "Which again shows, in my mind, just the flexibility of our air-launched effects initiatives because we can launch it from the air. We can launch it from the ground. We can launch from fixed-wing, rotary-wing, any type of ground vehicle."

The drones will form a swarm where surveillance ones with infrared sensors and electronic warfare payloads will detect and relay intelligence to human operators overseeing the operation. Humans will decide how to engage the enemy targets, whether through suicide drones or other firepower means.

Earlier this month, the Army's Combat Capabilities Development Command Aviation & Missile Center released a short animation of a similar drone swarm scenario.

Judging by the Biden administration's speed in transferring small high-tech drones to Ukraine, these new drone swarms could make their way to the war-torn country in the near term.

Look after your enzymes

WHAT is the most overlooked part of the body and the most important as we age?

The answer is your enzyme system. This short article could add many healthy years to your life and if you are a conspiracy theorist you might wonder why you and most doctors know little or nothing about it.

Every disease has inflammation within it. Our enzyme system is the key to reduce inflammation. If we don't have enough enzymes we will have inflammation. Your body would never do anything against you, it's always working in your interests. For example, if your arteries are blocked there is a really good reason why it's happening, as we will see.

Children spend most of the early part of their lives falling over and hurting themselves. How is it that a few minutes later they are back on their feet again and carry on as though nothing had happened? As we age, our ability to bounce back significantly decreases - probably from the age of 30 - and a fall for the elderly could be fatal. The answer is that children, like all of us, have wonderful self-repairing bodies, and when young they have full access to the nutrients and elements that make up our ability to repair. By the time we reach 30, the chances are that from that point on we will be in decline when it comes to making and utilising these resources. An example would be that men make less testosterone as they age and, in many cases, so do women.

When a doctor says that someone has an arterial blockage they see the blockage as the problem, discussing cholesterol for example, when in fact the real problem is inflammation and a buildup of scar tissue. The blockage is actually the body correcting serious arterial weaknesses which would've been caused by nutrient deficiencies and poisoned (farmed with chemicals) foods.

The most important factor in self-repair is the body's ability to manufacture and utilise enzymes.

Enzymes do the work in the body. Vitamin C is technically a co-enzyme; it needs enzymes to allow it to work properly. Enzymes are part of the cleanup crew. A child grazes its knee and will recover without a scar. It would be very different for the elderly. Let's face it, young kids bounce back really well. Toddlers fall flat on their faces all the time and so long as Mum or Dad don't go into a panic, they usually get right up again. Children generally have their full enzyme system working optimally, therefore rapidly repair.

There are many health professionals who believe that as we get older, the single most important element that we need are enzymes and I'd like to explain why.

If I were to get a client who was very elderly that said to me, "Do you know I just don't have the appetite to eat more than a sparrow's portion," the first thing I would propose would be that this person should take digestive enzymes at the beginning of each meal. This would mean that the little food that she is eating is utilised to the maximum. Many health professionals believe that from age 45 there is an increasing need for digestive enzymes. It seems pretty clear that enzymes can extend lifespan and keep us healthy.

Digestive enzymes are made from foods generally speaking. Ones you might know of would be bromelain from pineapple and papain from papaya. In a good digestive enzyme blend, you should find elements to help digest each type of food, from carbohydrates, fats, proteins, dairy and so forth. Many people with digestive problems find digestive enzymes help them cope with foods that don't agree with them at that time. This can be useful when going out for a meal.

I would like to bring your attention now to proteolytic enzymes. These are enzymes that digest proteins. They can be used to help digest protein-rich foods, however a much more important use is to take it at least 2 hours after eating proteins, in which case it digests scar tissue (fibrosis) both internally and externally, which it sees as foreign protein. Proteolytic enzymes dissolve the scar tissue, allowing the body to replace fibrosis with normal, healthy tissue. The body can then recycle and reuse the component parts.

Irritation leads to inflammation which leads to scar tissue, if not corrected. These proteolytic enzymes, 'prozymes' for short, are anti-inflammatory and thus reduce pain in the body.

They dissolve arterial plaque and the fibrosis, which is like a spider's web of scar tissue helping the arteries to stay strong. The body never goes wrong; it just adapts to whatever situation it's faced with and does the best it can, in this case to stop the arteries cracking and bursting. Prozymes can also help with respiratory issues and a host of other serious health problems.

So why have you not heard about this? Why is it not used in mainstream medicine? Well, it is in Germany and many other countries, where it's normal to give proteolytic enzymes before an operation and afterwards to aid avoiding the build-up of scar tissue. Very sensible, surely?

It's used to reduce miscarriages, which are quite often caused by inflammation because the woman has taken in foreign protein, i.e. a man's sperm. While we're on the subject, women need to research the fact that if they're having miscarriages they may be low on progesterone. Of course, one would want to find a natural hormone specialist who understands the non-pharmaceutical routes to health. Someone who is knowledgeable in the nutrient deficiencies and toxicity that can also cause miscarriages. Also, babies will be smarter if mum has been using enzymes. (Lugol's iodine, of course, along with selenium, are the two other incredibly important minerals for smart brain function in a newborn.)

If someone has been told by the doctor that they have a disease that ends in -itis or -osis then prozymes will help. Importantly in these times, prozymes dissolve blood clots and therefore can help dramatically to prevent and hopefully help recover from strokes.

The only group of people that are precluded from supplementing with enzymes are haemophiliacs; everybody else seems to be fine, according to the research of many decades.

The uses that the body has for these enzymes include breaking down toxins, cleaning the blood, supporting the immune system, converting protein into muscles, contracting muscles, helping chest and lung issues, inflammatory bowel issues, migraines and headaches, cardiovascular issues like angina, varicose veins, many ear, nose and throat issues, nerve damage, and so much more. It's commonly used for animals including racehorses.

There really isn't enough room to go through every single health issue that could be helped. I recommended anybody interested in this kind of information considers joining my secrethealthclub.com where the truth is told when it comes to health.

I've had to be circumspect in this article to make sure I don't tell you the whole truth, because it doesn't suit the outfits that would like to treat you chemically as opposed to offering you a true remedy. The UK government has banned me from telling you what my supplement website is, however as my name is very unusual it's probably not hard to guess.

Natural alternative to... deodorants

by DARREN SMITH

IN what will hopefully be the start of a series, readers can suggest natural (and cheap) alternatives to many of the products we use on our skin, clothes, children or around the home.

We all need healthy alternatives to those that are offered by advertised brands, which disguise the amount of harmful chemicals many people are unknowingly taking into their bodies every time they spray, brush, wash, scrub, pamper and shave.

This week, it is the turn of the humble deodorant. While the hippies might have had the right idea in dumping spray- and roll-on Big Pharma deodorants, their 'all natural solution' did little to solve the very real problem of underarm odour.

One of the worst ingredients is parabens. Scientific studies suggest that parabens can disrupt hormones in the body and harm fertility and reproductive organs, affect birth outcomes, and increase the risk of cancer.

Other ingredients in typical name brand products include: Phthalates and Triclosan which are known endocrine system disruptors; aluminium compounds linked with Alzheimer's and cancer; and Propylene glycol, a known neurotoxin which may affect the central nervous system, heart and liver health.

For this reason, I researched the best and easiest alternatives to this chemical concoction, and found the humble lemon to be the most effective, natural odour-repellent.

Simply take a lemon and slice it right down the middle, flick out any surface pips and use the half lemon like a typical ball roll-on, liberally covering the armpit area without letting the juice run down your side.

You might think this will leave you smelling lemon fresh all day, but the weak acid in the lemon is what neutralises the nifty bacteria leaving you smelling of... nothing, all day.

One word of caution - don't cut the lemon into wedges, slices or any other shape; the edge will hurt like hell!

GMO safeguards being removed

IN 2021, the UK Government held a consultation on plans to remove plants and animals created using experimental new GM techniques from the scope of the GMO regulations that protect our food, our farms and the natural environment.

The public responded with a resounding NO, but the government is pushing on regardless.

A statutory instrument (SI) has just been passed that changes GMO regulations by:

Creating a new class of GMO plants that ‘could have occurred naturally’ or through a list of techniques that are legally classed as traditional breeding methods.

Allowing these GMOs to be released for any purpose other than ‘marketing’ without proper safety checks or any measures to prevent escape and contamination.

No criteria were published during the passage of the SI for how to determine which genetic changes could have occurred in other ways. A government committee has now drawn up non-statutory guidelines but GM developers do not have to prove that they are following them. To make matters worse, a recent analysis raises serious concerns about conflicts of interest on this key committee.

The change will only apply in England. Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland all have much more GM-sceptical governments but that doesn’t mean they won’t be affected. Pollen and seed don’t respect national boundaries any more than they turn left at a roundabout!

Perhaps most worrying of all, Government Ministers have made it clear that they see this change as just the beginning. They want to open the UK’s door wide to all forms of genetic engineering and we need to act now to have any hope of stopping them.

Classifying GMOs on the basis of what other ways they might have been created (in a parallel universe?) makes no sense – scientifically or legally. This was very clear in responses to the consultation, in which even organisations that strongly support GMOs criticised this approach.

GMOs can spread easily, contaminating crops growing nearby and getting into the food chain or disrupting the ecosystem.

Details of GMOs released under the new rules will not be made public – farmers could be growing their crops next door to an experimental GM version of the same plant and they would not know about it until something went wrong.

by LIZ O’NEILL

The government claims that the new law is designed to support field trials but the wording will actually allow anyone to release these types of GMO as long as they don’t plan to sell what they grow.

GM Freeze wrote to a House of Lords committee to raise concerns about the SI. They then published a highly critical report on the plans.

We followed the Parliamentary progress of the SI in detail and briefed both MPs and members of the House of Lords. We also helped supporters to write to their own MP at the right time and in the most helpful way. Although we did not manage to stop the SI, MPs and peers made many of our key arguments in Parliament so those are now part of the official record.

Parliamentary processes mean we often have very little notice and need to ask supporters to act quickly so if you would like to help in this way in future, make sure you are signed up to receive our email alerts and action requests. Ministers made some new commitments during the debate on the SI so we will be following up to check that they stick to them. We are also building a network of parliamentarians and others who are willing to speak out against the removal of vital GM safeguards.

We can’t do any of this work alone so we are talking to farmers, charities, campaigners and more to help them understand the issues and how their organisation can help. We also have a petition to protect our GM labels and ensure they Don’t Hide What’s Inside our food.

Political developments like these can move very quickly, without much notice. We will add specific action requests from time to time, but you can always help by donating to GM Freeze. We are one of a handful of organisations working to challenge the use of GM in UK food and farming and we’re run on a shoestring so every penny really does count.

You can also join our email list to ensure you hear about new developments and action requests first.

Talk about the threat to our food and our farms. If you are part of an organisation that shares your concern about a high-tech takeover of the food chain, email info@gmfreeze.org to discuss how they can be part of the solution.

EMF ignored in massive insect population decline

by CAMILLA SCARAMANGA

SEVENTY-five percent of insects have been wiped out since 1989 in tandem with the rise of wireless technologies, such as cell phones, cell towers and more recently WI-FI and the Internet of Things.

All available data suggests impending extinction of all insect species. The main cause given for the decrease in insect populations is habitat loss due to intensive farming, followed by crop spraying, which started in earnest after World War 2, forty-four years before the surge of insect mortality.

While climate change and invasive species are also posited to contribute to insect decline, electromagnetic pollution is largely ignored by mainstream science and environmental groups. However, radiation is a strong contender according to independent studies. In one study comparing the impact on insects of agrochemicals to electromagnetic frequencies, the latter was found to be the most fatal, destroying three out of four hives.

Birds and insects are particularly vulnerable to electromagnetic fields which damage their reproductive capacity and disrupt their navigational acumen. Magnetite, stored in the beaks of birds and in the abdomen of bees, helps them to navigate. 5G will be deadly to insects, since they absorb far more radiation at mm wavelengths than earlier lower frequencies from 2G, 3G and 4G. This was demonstrated after the installation of a cell tower in Idaho in May 2021, where an entire beehive population at the adjacent farm died within a month.

The earth’s electromagnetic field is being shifted by ever-increasing levels of wireless technology, filling the air, earth and presently the sea. Many organisms, including insects, are reliant on the earth’s magnetic field for navigation and get disorientated by manmade frequencies, as explained by Dr Ulrich Warnke:

“All magnetic field sensitivity in living organisms, including elasmobranch fishes, is the result of a highly evolved, finely-tuned sensory system based on single-domain, ferro-magnetic crystals. Animals that depend on the natural electrical, magnetic, and electromagnetic fields for their orientation and navigation through earth’s atmosphere are confused by the much stronger and constantly changing artificial fields created by technology and fail to navigate back to their home environments.”

The cast of progress needs revision if it bequeathes erasure

Of insects, this has particularly impacted bees, contributing to bee colony collapse disorder. One study showed that it severely disturbed the bee colony and set off the swarming process. There was increased aggression and reduced aversive learning in exposed bees. Studies on fruit flies showed mobile phone radiation at 90Mhz decreases the reproductive capacity of insects by up to 60% through DNA fragmentation and cell death. Similar results were also found with microwave radiation at other frequencies. Other studies evinced abnormal mutation in the mealworm beetle, causing severe deformities in irradiated insect pupae.

Low level Radio Frequency Radiation sizeably influences the insect circadian clock. In one study it slowed down the cockroach rhythm under dim ultraviolet lights according with results on the Drosophila circadian clock. “300x weaker RF fields also slowed down the cockroach clock in a near zero static magnetic field, demonstrating the internal clocks of organisms are sensitive to weak RF fields.” This confirms the findings of Leif Salford showing that weak electromagnetic fields are just as harmful.

In May 2020, a study was featured in the Times newspaper intriguingly entitled: ‘Insects fall prey to diet of junk foods’. Investigating why grasshopper populations fell by nearly 1/3 over two decades in the Konza Prairie, North Eastern Kansas, a study was carried out between 1996-2017 in undisturbed habitats and in 2002-2017 where bison grazed. The article reported that Kasper, leading the study, said: “In many regions [of the world] the cause of decline was given to be insecticide use and habitat loss.” Wireless radiation was not mentioned. As there was no case of habitat loss or insecticide use in the Konza Prairie, they looked at the plants, and found greenhouse gas the main ingredient in the sugars, starches and cellulose of plants, making them less nutritious. Kasper therefore posited that the cause for insect decline could be depleted nitrogen, phosphorous, sodium, zinc and other nutrients in the plants due to rising CO2. He suggested re-greening was redundant, as plants were so nutrient depleted. However, the study ignored the fact that the area is also subject to solar radiation. Weather data is collected by a CR10 data logger accessed every 15 minutes via wireless internet, which monitors air temperature, relative humidity, solar radiation, wind speed and soil temperature.

On assessing the evidence, it is vital to look at the funding source of studies. Measures advocated by mainstream science to stem the tide of extinction do not address what may be the principal cause of insect decline. While a tiny fraction profit from wireless radiation, all pay for ignoring its impact on our fragile, finely tuned ecosystem.

The cast of progress needs revision if it bequeathes erasure. The only real solution is the immediate withdrawal of 4-5G cell towers and mobile phones worldwide, as a matter of urgency.

The jab, the lies and the truth

Components of the establishment are still refusing to accept the evidence; rejecting their own statistics which show that the covid jabs have already proved to be not just a failure, but a medical disaster

THE individuals who were foolish enough to accept the covid-19 jabs must now be able to see the consequences of their misplaced trust in the politicians, the media and the medical establishment.

Those who accepted one or more of the covid-19 jabs are now at risk from a variety of illnesses and are, paradoxically, even more likely to die of covid (the rebranded flu) than those who saw through the lies and rejected the call to be jabbed. The fully vaccinated make up nine out of ten covid-19 deaths in England.

When the jabs were first introduced (back in 2020) I warned that those who allowed themselves to be given one of the experimental injections would be immunologically compromised and vulnerable to a wide range of diseases. That warning was well-founded.

While government scientists and media doctors on television were accusing the unjabbed of endangering those around them I warned that it would be the other way around: the jabbed would endanger the unjabbed.

That's turned out to be true too.

Those who accepted the covid jab are now becoming symptomless carriers, before falling ill themselves. As predicted, they are almost certainly the cause of new variations of the flu and new infections. Moreover, there is early evidence that those who have been in close contact with the jabbed may be endangered. The nature and extent of the risk isn't clear yet – after all, we are in the early stages of the world's largest, most unethical and most unjustifiable medical experiment.

Frighteningly, the various components of the establishment are still refusing to accept the evidence; rejecting their own statistics which show that the covid jabs have already proved to be not just a failure, but a medical disaster.

Before I was officially downgraded to conspiracy theorist, I was for 50 years considered an expert on iatrogenesis (disease caused by medical treatment) and drug side effects, and I have steadfastly opposed this indecent jabbing programme.

Back in December 2020, I used evidence from the American Government to warn that the mRNA covid jabs could cause a huge number of serious adverse events – including myocarditis, heart attacks and strokes.

At this time I had also expressed my fear that the some might suffer brain damage as a result of the poisonous injection.

by Dr VERNON COLEMAN
MB ChB DSc

The big question was, can the lipid nanoparticles carry the mRNA jab across the blood brain barrier, which is a semi-permeable barrier of cells that prevent some substances in the blood from crossing into the protective fluid around the central nervous system.

After all, liquid nanoparticles are already used to deliver other drugs across the blood brain barrier. If the LNPs carry the mRNA jab into the brain, then the neurons, the brain cells, might be marked as foreign by the body's immune system. And as more booster jabs are given the problem will get worse. Brain cells might be targeted and killed by cytotoxic T cells.

Predictably, the mRNA jab was found in heart, lung, liver, testicles – and brain.

How many of the brain cells will die is something only time will tell.

There is hope not least from the fact that the combined might of the mainstream media and the medical profession has been far less successful in 'selling' the covid jab than they might have hoped

Children, of course, will be more vulnerable because they are more delicate and because they are likely to live longer.

Despite this, the dangerous and ineffective covid-19 jabs were rolled out to billions without doctors having the faintest idea what would happen.

In November 2021, a paper published in the medical journal, Circulation, concluded that the mRNA jabs dramatically increased inflammation on the endothelium and T cell infiltration of cardiac muscle. This linked the jabs to thrombosis, cardiomyopathy and other vascular events.

But the unethical jabbing continued.

Journalists ignored the fact that healthy sports professionals were collapsing with heart trouble. The highest profile death was that of cricketer Shane Warne who was double-jabbed, had promoted the jabs and who died 'suddenly and mysteriously' at the age of 52.

There were so many heart problems among children that defibrillators were put into schools.

But journalists and doctors found other, sometimes bizarre, explanations for this new epidemic of heart disease.

The Evening Standard in London said that up to 300,000 people were facing heart related illnesses due to something called Post Pandemic Stress Disorder. Wales OnLine reported that the huge increase in energy prices was responsible for the increase in heart attacks and strokes. The Daily Record said that paracetamol had increased heart attack risks and the risk of strokes. The Daily Express had this headline: 'Heart attacks: Does skipping breakfast increase your risk?' The Daily Mirror in Sri Lanka says the Delta variant of covid can cause heart trouble in patients with no previous history of problems. And the Daily Mirror in the UK said there was now a new miracle jab to save 1000s of lives by preventing heart attacks. Make people ill with one jab and mend them with another.

ABC7 in Los Angeles reported that doctors had warned that Super Bowl games might trigger heart attacks. The Mayo Clinic in the U.S. said that stress and chaos can cause heart disease (I first pointed that out in 1978 in a book called Stress Control. I was widely vilified for saying that. But now it seems stress is running amok). The Sun reported that the weather can cause heart attacks. There were claims that the epidemic of heart attacks were caused by people eating too much good food. Vitamin D shortages were also blamed. Scientific American said that covid-19 can lead to heart damage among people with no symptoms at all. National Geographic warned that covid-19 could cause heart palpitations, chest pain and blood clots.

A drug company argued that 'long covid' increases heart trouble.

Ah, 'Long Covid'!

In early 2022, the UK Government said that there were officially 1.3 million

Before I was officially downgraded to conspiracy theorist, I was for 50 years considered an expert people in Britain suffering from 'long covid' – and that the figure was rising fast. Two thirds of those individuals were reported to have been off work for a year or more.

Almost before the figure had been published it had been amended and the total was said to be approaching two million. A report from the U.S. suggested that around 12 million Americans were alleged to be off work with 'long covid'.

Covid believers claim that 12% of those who've had covid still have symptoms 12 weeks later.

The media ignored the fact that the biggest and most significant research into 'long covid', involving 26,000 individuals, concluded that 'long covid' is largely a psychological problem.

People who had taken a year off work on full pay didn't want to go back to their offices.

It's the beginning of the universal basic income – a critical part of the great reset, now being trialled in parts of Wales and Ireland.

There was never a covid pandemic but now we have a worldwide 'long covid' pandemic.

So, why have they created this fake disease - 'long covid'?

First, governments have welcomed the growth in the number of alleged covid sufferers because it helps make people afraid of the rebranded flu – and accept the jabs which are dishonestly promoted as preventing it.

Second, governments know that if a huge chunk of the workforce stays at home, the disruption and the cost will severely damage the economy.

Third, and this is crucial, the false 'long covid' disease is an excellent cover for the injuries caused by the covid-19 jabs.

A list of the commonest side effects associated with the covid-19 jabs just happens to be the same as the commonest symptoms associated with 'long covid'.

Naturally, anyone who dares to look at the evidence – and question the 'long covid' myth – is dismissed as a conspiracy theorist and banned from sharing their views.

However, there is hope, not least from the fact that the combined might of the mainstream media and the medical profession has been far less successful in 'selling' the covid jab than they might have hoped.

Back in the late summer of 2021, we were told that just a few million people had refused to be jabbed. The unjabbed were made to feel threatened and isolated. It seemed as though the lies and deceptions of the politicians, advisors, doctors and journalists had worked.

But in April 2022, The Expose website used Government figures to show that at least 19.2 million people in England had not received a single covid-19 jab. Moreover, many of those who had received the first jab had refused to have a second or third jab.

The Government lied about the number of people who had been jabbed. Now we have to wait to see what will happen to the foolish millions who allowed themselves to be poisoned with the covid jabs.

Right at the start I warned that more people would be killed by the jabs than by covid-19.

I'm afraid I stand by that prediction.

HOPE - our awake home education hub

Hoping to model a better education system - teaching critical thinking, not slavish acceptance

WHAT a rollercoaster the last six months have been! To have taken a dream such a short while ago, and converted it into an actual functioning and successful reality today, is simply astonishing. The support we have received from up and down the country and even from abroad, has taken our breath away.

We have been bombarded with requests from deeply concerned awake families, who are now pulling their children from state indoctrination in increasing numbers. We have read stories that inspire, and others that expose the monstrous agenda of the state system, that seeks to create future generations of young adults completely unable to think for themselves, and entirely reliant on an increasingly cruel, unnatural, corrupt, vacuum-packed system to survive.

The state education system is a small part of a wider world agenda that is now so entirely warped, we are now witness to the spectacle of international women's sport being gradually destroyed from the inside out, with biologically born men crushing the lifelong efforts and sacrifices of women. As great believers in equality, we personally find this entirely unacceptable, and such manifestations of insanity should be enough to leave every single person of sound mind disgusted. This is the harsh reality of the world the establishment want our children to regard as 'normal' and acceptable, at home as well as at school.

For many decades we have all been expected to trust, enrol and immerse our children into the polluted bathwater of the state's education system, that is still largely based upon the Prussian model, without so much as batting an eyelid. A system that very carefully selects the narratives and angles chosen for it by the state when covering local and world issues, as well as historical events. It will use state-sponsored propaganda platforms and vaunt them as impartial and accurate with offerings such as 'BBC Newsround' shown to our children at school whenever possible.

For example, today we see children encouraged to 'Stand with Ukraine' and festoon themselves in Ukrainian yellow and blue, by state trained teachers and parents alike, the majority of which couldn't put a pin in a map on Ukraine!

They have been brainwashed through the poison of corporate media for weeks on end through every available Western media outlet - 'Russia bad, Ukraine good' - over and over. And so off they duly trot to repeat and spread the all-new virtue signalling mantra. It is as predictable as it is disappointing to witness.

At HOPE we investigate unfolding events such as this in a balanced and open-minded fashion, drawing from a multitude of different angles and sources of information. This, of course, is not an easy task as now Russian media outlets or those that support Russia, have been silenced and banned from the West by organisations like the UK's Ofcom. Predictably, Russia has reciprocated with similar measures, as a tidal wave of Russiaphobia sweeps the West with attacks on Russian-owned businesses and individuals echoing the hate for the unvaccinated just a few months ago. It is a shameful situation.

The support we have been receiving at HOPE has been steadily growing, and now we are crystalising that support into action. We have been blessed by the firm backing from a very special group of people indeed, the Alpha Team Assemble, under the wonderful and irrepressible Danny Glass. Their warmth and support for HOPE has been astounding, such is our shared passion and vision for our children.

This army of experienced and resilient awake volunteers have been hard at work with us improving our buildings and facilities. So much has been accomplished so far, with a lot more planned for the future.

As we grow, so does our dream, and we believe that soon we will be in a position whereby our model can be planted into other fertile soils, and grow in other areas of the world, and bring HOPE to even more awake families seeking support and freedom from a corrupted state system.

The topics we are currently covering at HOPE include the core subjects of English, Maths and Science. With Drama, Spanish, Practical Skills, Art, Cookery, Survival Skills and others running weekly.

Our focus is on the applied use of such subjects that we tune to suit the needs of the students. For example, we have recently run a 'Wild Eating' course which focused on food that can be foraged and caught along our extensive UK shorelines, and how to cook and eat it safely. Equipping our children with such knowledge and the confidence to use it, could not only one day prove to be incredibly useful, but also brings us closer to the world in which we live, and help us respect it and understand that there is a huge difference between taking what we want, and taking what we need.

Critical thinking forms the nucleus of our ethos at HOPE. For example, our history sessions focus on how one-sided and propagandised historical events have been, and are being used to control and manipulate society as a whole.

This being especially true when such propaganda is filtered down into film and TV that have been cynically twisted so as to disguise historical accuracy.

At HOPE, we look and study from a multitude of angles, seeking to discover who benefits from any given mainstream narrative with an open mind, and use our own initiative and problem-solving skills to fill in any spaces. Only then can we begin to discover the truth about so much of what we have all been spoon-fed since childhood. After all, those that know the real history, can often predict and prepare for the real future.

Our huge countryside location in the heart of Sussex enables us to reconnect with what it truly means to be a human being. We have a wonderful space and openness around us, where our children are able to play, get muddy, investigate nature and learn together in a safe and nurturing environment. At HOPE, our children are free from the ever increasing vice-like bureaucracy that seeks their life-long subservience from early childhood. HOPE children play free - and learn free.

As individuals, we are only a tiny part of the world in which we live, but we are connected to everyone and everything in it. The respect and knowledge our distant forefathers once held in high regard for the richness and diversity of life around them, we will once again ignite in the children we teach.

With the continued support and warmth we have been receiving, we are in no doubt that our philosophy, and the beacon of light and HOPE we hold aloft will bring inspiration and support to already awakened families, and those currently on their own personal journey of awakening to the realities of the world they live in.

And we will be here for them all when they arrive.

SOCIAL REFORMATION

For fairer, better, more progressive methods of...

Government, Electoral representation,

Money creation, Education, Law & law enforcement

...etcetera, please go to www.theprospectofbabel.com

(as the end of the present order is inevitable, what comes next is a pressing question).

Note to reader: The Prospect of Babel outlines a concept-polity, the purpose of which is to act as an index for social transition, that is open to revision, modification, moderation and so on (welcoming correction on every level, while inviting others to refine it – which renders the reader, in part, the writer, or leastwise the righter via critical reading).

In respect of the text, there's three errors a reader, however clever, may make, to wit: to mistake the narrator for a dictator, and see what's propositional as prescriptive; to read what's stylised as literal; to perceive as radical what's actually pragmatic (by virtue of timescale, analysis, and open-minded trial) – to iterate, the document is not a blueprint for a utopia (more of an ideal that invites dialogue).

Please note also that it's written in blank verse – so blank in fact that you may not at first discern it (its form not affecting its legibility, though a reader may note an apparent over-use of commas – this seeming error stemming from the investment of metre [viz. if spoken, it has rhythms]. To this end most of the commas are optional (being formal more than grammatical devices).
